Bennett will stick if defeated

By JAKE BANKY

Premier Bill Bennett says he won't call an election if his government — which holds a four-seat majority — is defeated in a vote during the new session of the legislature.

The premier revealed his intentions in an off-the-cuff comment while talking to reporters earlier this week.

The first session of the 32nd B.C. Legislature was prorogued in a brief ceremony today and the second session opens at 2 p.m. Friday with the Throne Speech.

Bennett says he is not worried by the meagre four-vote margin he commands in the 57-seat house.

If he is defeated, says the premier, his government will carry on and he will not consider the loss of a vote to be a loss of confidence.

Going into the new session the NDP opposition is giving serious consideration to tactics aimed at bringing the government down.

If the Bennett government is to avoid a defeat it will have to follow the same rules so strictly applied last session — no travelling by ministers, all backbenchers to be present and accounted for and no unnecessary baiting of the opposition.

Whether this approach proves effective will depend on how serious the NDP is about forcing a crucial vote when just enough Socreds are missing from the chamber.

The opposition, it is certain, will not agree to "pairing" of members for voting purposes.

Socred party whip George Mussallem will have a busy time marshalling his troops.

However many observers feel Bennett could not get away with his decision to stay on if the government is defeated in a vote.

Although there are well-accepted constitutional routes around such a defeat, it's believed public pressure would force the premier to call an election.

The Throne Speech to be read by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving, blueprinting the government's plans for the coming year, is expected to contain few surprises.

Senior civil servants predict it will be a medley of old favorites from previous speeches.

There will be a renewed commitment to improved forest management, particularly to job creation through an accelerated reforestation program.

The Denticare program, main feature of the 1979 Throne Speech, could make a comeback.

There could also be a new pledge of a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, promised by Bennett last year but lately cast into doubt by Socred prevarication.

A sure bet for the new session is legislation to provide fresh ground rules for the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Another sure thing is legislation to guarantee fair compensation for people who have their property expropriated.

Attorney-General Allan Willians will follow through on the government's promise to bring in — at long last — legislation dealing with Sunday store openings.

It's understood his commitment to the county system met with far too much opposition within cabinet.

The legislation will be delayed and the people of B.C. will have to wait another year before their concerns about regional districts are dealt with.

Even if it doesn't rate a mention, the new session is expected to see the

Doctors support nurses as talks set to resume

By MIKE HUGHES

The nurses, members of the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C., Tuesday voted 98 per cent in favor of a strike to back their demands. Talks involving mediator Clarke Gilmour are set for next week.

"The nurses' heavy vote in favor of a strike if an agreement is not reached is clear evidence of the rightness of the nurses' bargaining position," B.C. Medical Association president Dr. Mel Petreman said today.

He said the association's board of directors has unanimously backed the nurses and added that it is important now that both sides get back to the bargaining table.

"The fact that the nurses have been pushed to the point of having a strike vote is an example of the deteriorating condition of our health care plan in B.C.," said Petreman, a Nanaimo physician.

"While not directly involved in these negotiations the provincial government through its under-funding of the health care system is certainly very much a partner in the negotiations."

Meanwhile, Gilmour is to meet Monday with representatives of the Health Labor Relations Association which bargains for the 113 B.C. hospitals.

He will meet Tuesday with negotiators for the RNABC.

"It is our hope that this will mean the beginning of a productive round of bargaining," RNABC spokesman Jerry Miller said today.

He said so far there has been no real negotiating because HLRA has refused to talk about the issues.

The nurses — including those who work in nine Victoria area hospitals — were decisive in their strike vote.

Region waffles on bus passes

Capital Regional District politicians wouldn't say yes and wouldn't say no Wednesday on the controversial issue of bus passes for senior citizens on supplementary incomes.

Instead, they waffled.

They first rejected a motion by Victoria director Ald. Bill McElroy that the program be continued after the $5 bus passes expire June 1.

Then they rejected a suggestion that the passes not be renewed.

Instead, they took pot shots at the media for reporting remarks made by board chairman Jim Campbell at a meeting of the transit planning committee.

Campbell brought howls of protest from angry pensioners when he said special concessions like the bus passes are a vote-buying gimmick and that senior citizens drive good cars and ride the ferries for fun.

Transit planning committee chairman Norma Sealey said the press should have concentrated on the real issue — whether social assistance should be subsidized through public transit.

She said it is difficult to have all the facts presented when the press concentrates on "two or three crummy remarks."

The board decided that Sealey and Campbell should meet with Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy to

Bogota hostage talks stalled

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Mediation efforts stalled today at the besieged Dominican Embassy residence and authorities moved riflemen into firing positions around the building where leftist guerrillas were holding 45 diplomats hostage, including the U.S. Ambassador.

As tension mounted, Mexican Ambassador Ricardo Galan told reporters outside the residence that the guerrillas have rejected former Foreign Minister Alfredo Vasquez Carrizosa as mediator and have set a 10 p.m. EST deadline for the government to enter direct negotiations through Foreign Minister Diego Uribe.

President Julio Cesar Turbay said he would study a five-point ransom demand for releasing the estimated 45 hostages including ambassadors and other top diplomats from 16 countries and the Vatican.

The government press office said mediator Alfredo Vasquez Carrizosa, a former foreign minister, had relayed the following guerrilla demands to the government:

—Withdrawal of armed forces from around the besieged residence "under threat of taking reprisals against the hostages if the troops try to storm the occupied diplomatic site."

—Freedom for jailed guerrilla suspects, particularly 311 to be named later.

—Publication in major Colombian newspapers of a manifesto by the group, which has identified itself as being from the April 19th Movement.

—Payment of $50 million ransom which could be collected from the countries whose diplomats are held hostage.

—Negotiations between the guerrillas and the government.

The government statement said Vasquez expressed his concern to the guerrillas for the wounded inside the residence and had suggested the release of women hostages.

Clover Point foul-up billed to taxpayers

Taxpayers of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay will be stuck with a $475,000 bill as a result of the Clover Point outfall settlement approved Wednesday by the Capital Regional District.

And there will be legal fees on top of that.

Victoria director Ald. Bill McElroy asked board chairman Jim Campbell what the cost of Vancouver lawyer Mary Southin's services would be.

Campbell said no bill has yet been received.

The three municipalities will pay $225,000 of $324,000 awarded contractor Harry Berg who abandoned the controversial project in 1977.

Berg claimed the design of the outfall did not adequately compensate for tides and currents in the area.

Engineering consultants Ker Priestman and Associates and Associated Engineering Services Ltd. will pay the remainder.

In addition, the three municipalities will also pay $250,000 for polyethelene pipe purchased by Berg, including diffuser sections and concrete weights.

The contract for a 6,900-foot outfall was let for $2,547,500 and Berg has been paid $1,545,000 for work done to take the pipe about 200 feet off the end of Clover Point.

Campbell said the pipe lying on the ocean floor in Ross Bay will be salvaged.

The board recently agreed to pay $280,000 to consultants CH2M Hill for a new outfall design.

Directors were told it will cost approximately $4 million to take the pipe out 3,600 feet.

Uranium mines driven out?

Environmentalists were elated today, but others expressed disappointment with Premier Bill Bennett's decision to place a moratorium on uranium mining.

The president of the B.C. & Yukon Chamber of Mines warned that mining companies will be driven away from B.C. as a result of the government's seven-year freeze on uranium exploration and mining.

Don Mustard said uranium firms will now move into Saskatchewan and Ontario.

"A study in Saskatchewan indicated uranium exploration and mining are safe and these activities also go on in Ontario," Mustard said.

Jerry Hammersmith, a cabinet minister minister in the Saskatchewan government, was cynical about the Bennett moratorium, calling it a "crass" way to get some political mileage.

He said the B.C. announcement is not specific enough. As well, B.C. has neither the worker health and safety regulations nor the environmental regulations that are in place in Saskatchewan, Hammersmith said.

The freeze announced Wednesday by Premier Bennett also killed a potential $300 million deal to sell B.C. uranium to Korea.

Don Sawyer of Norcen Energy Resources Ltd. said his firm and its partners had until Dec. 31, 1981, to get required permits to deliver 4.3 million pounds of uranium to Korea during a 10-year period beginning in 1983.

"If we hadn't received the permits by that time, then the contract would have been null and void," he said in Calgary following the Bennett announcement.

A consortium of companies headed by Norcen has invested $5.7 million in exploration and engineering studies for its Blizzard uranium property about 50 kilometres southeast of Kelowna.

Rick Hicks, manager of the mines chamber, said more than $25 million has been spent in B.C. on uranium exploration and development in the past few years and that there are ore than 30 mining companies involved in the field.

But if mining men were unhappy, environmentalists were delighted by the moratorium.

However, at the same time they are wondering what motivated the decision.

Bennett, in announcing the

Schmidt nearer boycott

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt called again today for a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan and hinted strongly that West Germany will join the United States in a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

(See related stories, pages 20 and 43)

In the opening speech of a foreign-policy debate in the Bundestag, or parliament, Schmidt said West Germany, as well as "the great majority of the peoples of the world," demand "a prompt end to the Soviet military intervention.

"The Federal Republic is also of the opinion that it is up to the Soviet Union to create the conditions in which teams from all countries can participate in the (Olympic) games," Schmidt said.

"These conditions do not exist — or should I say, do not yet exist, at the present time."

Schmidt noted that the national Olympic committees have until late May to accept or reject formal invitations to the Summer Games in Moscow.

moratorium, said that a $2 million royal commission into uranium mining will stop functioning immediately.

Dr. David Bates, who headed the inquiry, was in Australia studying uranium mining when the moratorium was issued and had still to issue his report.

"We have some regrets that all the information wasn't able to get out," John Rogers, a spokesman for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, said Wednesday.

"Bennett's decision was based on political issues and not scientific data. He could have made the decision some time ago."

The union, environmental groups, the United Church and some Social Credit MLAs have been fighting uranium mining in the province.

"It's a purely political decision and from that point of view not a complete victory," said Michael Jessen, president of the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

A poll taken by the provincial government showed most B.C. residents oppose uranium mining. Forty-six uranium deposits lie in ridings represented by four cabinet ministers — Bennett, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, Tourism Minister Pat Jordan and Health Minister Rafe Mair.

Bennett has said the decision was not taken because much of the anti-mining pressure has come from residents of these ridings.

The decision diffuses potential criticism by the opposition NDP on the eve of the opening of a new legislative session Friday. However, the government is expected to come under fire for having wasted money and effort on the Bates inquiry.

An anti-nuclear activist in Saskatchewan termed Wednesday's decision a "great victory."

The Saskatchewan government decided in June of 1978 that rich uranium deposits should be developed, despite cries from environmentalists of the dangers involved.

Jim Harding, a member of the Regina Group for a Non-Nuclear Society said his group had actively co-operated with similar groups in B.C. in bringing about the moratorium.

The Bennett government has announced it will act in the coming session to make the moratorium law.

Health Minister Rafe Mair, only three months in the portfolio, has made it clear he is disillusioned with the heroin program established by his predecessor, Bob McClelland, over the objections of civil libertarians.

Most legislative openings in recent years have been enlivened by demonstrators making one point or another.

But Premier Bennett's announcement Wednesday of a seven-yeat blanket freeze on uranium mining and exploration is expected to defuse the demonstration.

negotiate costs of the bus passes.

McCarthy said today she will talk to Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm and arrange a meeting with the CRD and the Urban Transit Authority.

Larry Miller, assistant general manager of the UTA, was present at the committee meeting where the passes for senior citizens on supplementary incomes was discussed.

Sealey said she has since learned the UTA has been negotiating with the human resources ministry and wondered why information on the negotiations was not given at that meeting.

She said coverage of Campbell's remarks has resulted in "religious zealots defending the world from the callous actions of the CRD."

Sealey said her committee does not want to be like Oliver Twist when it comes to negotiating for $250,000 in estimated lost revenue resulting from the bus passes.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, a member of the provincially-appointed UTA board, said he likes the bus pass program but emphasised the human resources ministry should pay for it.

Air fares on sale

TORONTO (UPC) — Air Canada announced plans for a spring "seat sale" Thursday, discounting fares on about 350,000 roundtrips on its North American routes by 47 to 69 percent.

The national airline said that, subject to government approval, it would offer a 50 percent fare discount on 502,000 seats on domestic, short-haul flights. A short-haul flight is less than 1,000 miles.

Another 119,000 seats on domestic long-haul flights and 100,000 on long-haul flights to the United States will be discounted 47 to 69 percent. The discounts will be offered between April 13 and June 5.

On long-haul domestic and international routes, reservations must be made 30 days in advance.

Five hospitals, Aberdeen, Glengarry, Gorge Road, Mount Tolmie and St. Mary's Priory, recorded 100 per cent strike votes. The other votes: Royal Jubilee, 98.8 per cent; Victoria General, 97.6 per cent; Mount St. Mary, 94.7 per cent and Saanich Peninsula, 98 per cent.

The Vancouver Province reported today that the HLRA would make a new and substantial wage offer to the nurses Monday but there was no confirmation of the report.

The dispute centres around wages with HLRA offering a 21-per-cent increase over two years retroactive to Jan. 1 and the nurses asking for an 18-per-cent increase in one year with a $145-a-month "catch-up" payment.

Pipeline fire results in gas imports

OTTAWA (UPC) — The National Energy Board said today TransCanada Pipelines Ltd. will import 173 million cubic feet of natural gas from Tennessee to make up the gas shortfall caused by Tuesday's explosion in Brooks, Alta.

The imported gas, which was "borrowed" from the Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., began arriving in Canada near Niagara Falls, Ont. Wednesday and will continue to flow until next Monday.

The NEB said the application was for an emergency order necessitated by the fire and explosion at the Alberta Gas Trunk Line Company's Brooks, Alta. compressor station late Tuesday.

The blaze, near the southern Albertan hamlet of Princess, raged for more than five hours, creating an inferno that could be seen more than 160 kilometers away.

Today, Alberta Gas Trunk Lines announced the explosion had destroyed or seriously damaged all turbine units on the site.

Also destroyed or damaged were an auxiliary shop and control centre and an experimental greenhouse near the site.

250 idled at Hydro

About 250 B.C. Hydro employees in Greater Victoria were off the job today because members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers put up picket lines to protest work they said was being done by a non-union company.

But a spokesman for the company involved says the IBEW is all wrong and the firm is unionized.

"They're nuts, absolutely crazy," Reg Antrobus said of the IBEW's pickets.

The work involved the moving of utility poles from a storage yard on Jacklin Road to a Quesnel Street location. The union said the work is being done by Antrobus Trucking Ltd.

However, Antrobus, who is selling the property where the poles were stored, said today the moving job is almost finished and it is being done by union people.

He said his son Wayne owns the trucking company and he is a member of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

The drivers who work for him are members of the Teamsters Union, Antrobus said.

A Hydro spokesman said the majority of those off the job today are office workers at the company's new Royal Oak centre.

He said the walkout is illegal but that Hydro has not taken any action to put an end to the picketing.

Supervisory staff were handling whatever work they could and emergency situations would be taken care of, he added.

Calif. flood effects not felt yet in Victoria

Recent floods are affecting the quality of California vegetable produce reaching Victoria grocery bins but as yet there are no local shortages or price hikes.

One buyer said quality is marginal at best for some crops which were submerged by the nine-day deluge.

The extent of the damage to the California vegetable crop will not be felt for another month or two, he said.

Some vegetables, such as carrots, are still being supplied from local storage.

Lettuce, a major California import, is still available in normal quantities.

Meanwhile, California farmers predict the damage to crops and fields from floods and mudslides may reach $98 million.

Polish seaman given reprieve

VANCOUVER (CP) — Polish seaman Tadeusz Jakubowski was quietly celebrating Wednesday night after he was granted a reprieve of a deportation order that he leave Canada by tonight.

Vancouver South MP John Fraser said in Ottawa that acting immigration minister Lincoln Alexander had interceded to give Jakubowski time to fight the deadline.

The immigration department has ruled that the 40-year-old shipjumper does not qualify as a political refugee.

"I was very determined that I will not have to leave Canada because I had no place to go," Jakubowski said. "Under no circumstances would I return to Poland voluntarily. I would be facing imprisonment and maltreatment and persecution.

"If I am forced to leave this country and be sent to Poland I would prefer to hang myself or jump off a bridge. At least the end would be faster."

Jakubowski's lawyer, Don Rosenbloom, said in an interview from Whitehorse that Fraser told him the Progressive Conservative administration is not able to release a minister's permit because Immigration Minister Ron Atkey is not in Ottawa.

"But Fraser met with senior immigration officials and he now suggests that my client stay in Canada past the 28th deadline and wait it out until March 3 when the Liberals will issue the permit.

"I've talked to my client and he has made the decision to remain here beyond Feb. 28 and will take the risk of initiation of proceedings against him."

Liberal Senator Ray Perrault had asked Alexander to stay the case until it could be reviewed by the incoming Liberal government.

Perrault had expressed surprise at the difference in treatment given Jakubowski, who jumped ship in Vancouver in October, 1977, and two Russians who jumped ship earlier this month and were quickly given ministerial permits allowing them to remain in Canada while their applications for refugee status are processed.

Doing it wrong for 100 years?

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka was told Wednesday in B.C. Supreme Court that he did not have the power to unilaterally buy real estate for the municipality in 1977.

"Then we've been running it bassackwards for 100 years," McKitka told Justice George Murray.

McKitka, on trial on nine criminal charges, including breach of trust, claimed that while mayor between 1975 and 1977 the Municipal Act had empowered him to instruct a real estate agent to option for Surrey.

He testified that his understanding of the act, plus legal advice from the municipal solicitor, had led him to believe there was nothing wrong with asking real estate agent Russell Wicks to try to option property in 1977 for a farmers' market.

"You were certainly getting lousy legal advice," said Justice Murray.

Maybe West doesn't want to be represented by Grits

Allan Fotheringham

VANCOUVER — There is something so typically Liberal in this sudden discovery that our bright and bushy new government wants to find some way of getting representation from the West.

As Joe Clark says quite correctly, you don't change the rules just because you've lost the game.

The Liberals, being the Liberals, with their God-given belief in infallibility, are hilarious in their instant concern and lachrimose wailings about the plight of the three provinces that are so unfortunate as to be bereft of a single Liberal.

It is as if one portion of the realm had been struck with the heaves, or locusts, or drought. A national emergency must be declared because the vast plains and mountains have somehow come down with a rare disease: Lack-of-Liberals.

As an instant cure, the lone strangers, Lloyd Axworthy and Bob Bockstael, have been wandering from one expense-account hotel suite to the next, like missionaries sent to the jungle, charged with finding a sure-fire prescription that would bring the intellectually-starved westerners back into the category of civilized folk. A man wants to sit down and weep.

How very Liberal the whole farce is. How very typical of the party that invented arrogance; the party of C.D. Howe, Jack Pickersgill, Don Macdonald, Otto Lang, Pierre Trudeau and Coutts-Davey.

It apparently has never occurred to any of the geniuses who take control of our fates once again on Monday that the reason there are no Liberal MPs in the West is because the West doesn't want Liberal MPs.

People in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia do not like the Liberal Party, and with good reason — considering how the party has treated those three provinces recently.

Those three provinces have seen what has happened when they did support the Liberals. In 1968, B.C. elected 16 Liberal MPs. Alberta, if you'll recall, elected four. Manitoba sent five to Ottawa. Saskatchewan sent two.

And after experiencing the Liberal pat-on-the-head tokenism, the West in its wisdom sent only seven Liberals to Ottawa in 1972.

They looked, you see, they sampled the merchandise, and they didn't like what they had bought.

At the base of it all is the curious Liberal belief that any segment of society not touched by the party is somehow deprived (if not depraved).

The spurious Axworthy-Bockstael expedition (quite the shortest in-depth investigation ever conducted) had one delightful Liberal touch. They set out to talk to the defeated Liberal candidates in the West, to sample their wisdom.

Why talk to the people the voters just rejected? If the rejected ones had had any feeling for or understanding of the public, they would have been elected.

In the same category of goofiness is the brain-wave being pushed by Sen. Ray Perrault, who is quite the silliest politician in B.C., that defeated Liberal candidate Gordon Gibson run in the Quebec seat of Frontenac.

Mr. Gibson is a very bright fellow, but he has now been defeated three times in tries at Ottawa. He has also failed to revive the unrevivable B.C. Liberal party. There is obviously something about him that B.C. voters don't like.

How a Liberal who has been rejected three times by B.C. voters would somehow help the West by running in Quebec is something that only the fevered brain of Perrault and other desperate strategists could explain.

The Trudeaucrats have spent 13 casual years using up the sympathy they enjoyed in the West. They can't get it back by gimmicks, parachuted Senators and seven-day studies.

Engineer sex bias charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A complaint of sex discrimination has been laid against the engineering department at the University of British Columbia by a group representing five women's organizations.

Engineering students have come under fire from women's groups for their high-profile antics, which include an annual Lady Godiva ride in which a naked women rides a horse around the UBC campus, escorted by a mob of red-sweatered, hooting engineers.

The complaint was made to the B.C. Human Rights Branch.

Defusing a bomb

The Social Credit government's decision to place a seven year moratorium on uranium exploration and mining in B.C. is as politically expedient as it is ecologically sound.

Last September the Royal Commission on uranium exploration and mining released its interim report. It recommended that exploration continue but under tighter restrictions. But commission chairman Dr. David Bates also said at a coinciding news conference that the health and environmental risks had not been appraised, and wouldn't be until after the commission completed further hearings.

Former Environment Minister Rafe Mair and Energy Minister James Hewitt at the time were pleasantly surprised at the tame nature of the recommendations. Tighter exploration restrictions were immediately implemented but the information gap on possible health and environmental hazards was ignored.

Yet Premier Bennett now halts exploration and future mining despite what he describes as "sound scientific evidence which refutes much of the opposition to uranium mining." Last fall that evidence apparently wasn't in the hands of the commission or government but exploration continued. Why wasn't the moratorium imposed then?

Many British Columbians are not convinced that uranium mining in B.C. would be ecologicially sound or safe. But while breathing a sign of approval over the government's decision, one cannot help but take into account political circumstances that brought this abrupt turn around in policy.

Uranium mining in B.C. to date is small economic potatoes. While there is some exploration, there are no producing mines. Politically, the economic benefit to be gained is outweighed by the tremendous amount of emotionally charged public opinion against the excavation of radioactive minerals.

In the give-and-take world of environmental concerns versus desires for industrial expansion, this concession places the government in a positive position going into major battles that will be waged over the Kemano II expansion, several dams proposed by B.C. Hydro and oil tankers on the west coast.

The decision also defuses plans for a large anti-uranium mining demonstration Friday which the government knew would deflect media attention from its throne speech.

The government has already stated that nuclear power does not figure in the province's energy future. That being the case, there is little reason to subject B.C. residents to possible radiation pollution for the sake of exporting uranium. And for that reason alone, despite the curious timing, the decision is welcome.

Fishermen and tourists

As Victoria pursues its Inner Harbor enhancement schemes, care should be taken to avoid a mistake made by San Francisco.

Over the years Fisherman's Wharf has become the one attraction most often associated with that California city's tourist industry. A string of restaurants and souvenir shops along the waterfront attract thousands of visitors.

However, the name 'Fisherman's' has become a misnomer and city officials are attempting to rectify the problem. The first thing a tourist notices is that there isn't a bona fide fisherman or fishboat in sight. The city now hopes to convert an area of Fisherman's Wharf into a fresh fish processing plant.

The theory is that a dose of the real McCoy — salty fishermen, working boats, bulging nets, shoreworkers cleaning the catch, and the associated smells — would do wonders for the tourist industry. We're inclined to agree.

San Francisco made its mistake years ago when the pressures of tourist-related business displaced the fishermen and left the area with a cosmetic fishing atmosphere.

Schemes are afoot locally to enhance the tourist trade with Victoria's commercial fishing heritage. At the moment, there is almost complete segregation between the tourist and fisherman. But a public waterfront path between the B.C. Steamship Company dock and our own fishermen's wharf in James Bay would change that.

The romance, color and sense of adventure evoked by the west coast fishing fleet makes a lasting impression on people from landlocked regions of the country. As plans evolve to upgrade Victoria's Inner Harbor, the atmosphere and facilities that keep fishermen an intregal part of the waterfront should not be unduly disturbed.

JAMES RESTON

Goofy political process

WASHINGTON — Now that the first presidential primary election in New Hampshire is over — one down and 36 to go — we will begin to see the slide of money and opinion toward the characters with the most votes.

Never mind whether they have the qualities to be president. On the theory that some of the people in some of the most unrepresentative states of the Union know best — a dubious proposition which no "patriot" dare challenge — it is assumed that those who get the most votes are best qualified to govern the Republic. This is like saying that the prettiest girl in the Olympics should get the gold medal.

Yet, that's the way it is. All the power centers will now move toward the potential winners. Labor union leaders who used to think Carter was worse than Taft or Hartley, will now hedge their bets.

Votes mean money

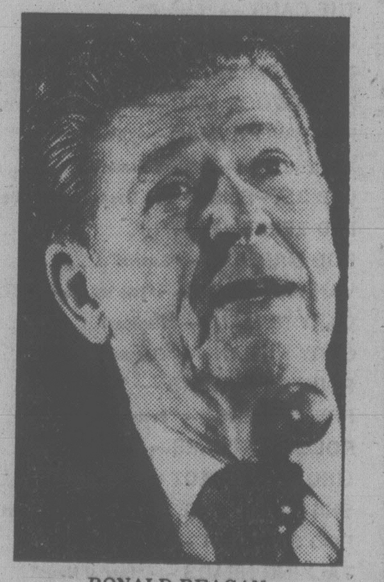
Business leaders who preferred Ronald Reagan or John Connally, and didn't know much about George Bush — and still don't — are putting their money where the votes are. And governments — including the Soviet government — which were questioning President Carter's judgment on economics and foreign policy not so long ago have been reading the election returns and deciding to be more "understanding" because they think they will probably have to live with him for almost five more years.

There isn't a single candidate in this campaign, including the front-runners, who wouldn't admit to his wife or his dearest friend in private that this is the goofy way to pick a president or win the confidence of the American people.

The political brokers and money-managers are even more cynical. They explain, with their gift of cliches, that they are "cooperating with the democratic process" ... "keeping the options open" ... "facing the facts" ... "adjusting to reality," etcetera. "Pragmatism" is the fancy word for selfishness, which in politics means accepting whoever or whatever leads in the popularity polls.

The election so far is making a lot of news but not much sense. The theory of this new democratized system of 37 primary elections was that it would clarify the problems for decision and give "the people" — instead of those bums in the backroom — a chance to choose between the candidates who had some vision and answers for the coming years.

This clearly has not happened. The president has been successful by avoiding the issues so far. Bush has been successful by organizing the precincts and other political bushes. And Baker of Tennessee and Anderson of Illinois, probably the most experienced and attractive of the Republican candidates, have failed because they have been doing their work in the Congress, and came in late when nobody was listening.



RONALD REAGAN
. . .opinion slides his way

The primary system does have some advantages. For example, it has put to the test the illusion and the cult of personality of the Kennedys. It forced the senior senator from Massachusetts, rather unfairly in a way — since he has had much more experience in his 17 years in the Senate than either of his more illustrious brothers — to measure up to a ridiculous Kennedy mythology, and he failed what was obviously an outrageous test.

But the system has not really given some others an honest chance. Baker, Anderson, and Dole among others were dismissed on the assumption that they didn't have a chance before they were given a chance. It's too bad, for instance, that Dole ran out of money and support before his sense of humor was appreciated. We haven't had a giggle in Washington since Adlai Stevenson said he'd make a deal with the Republicans: If they stop telling lies about him, he'd stop telling the truth about them.

So in this vaguely gloomy mood about the campaign, I went back to an old catalog of political maxims by one of my heroes, Paul Valery, the French poet, who had gone through all this before, and who thought we'd never have a League of Nations until we developed a League of Minds. He didn't know much about New Hampshire or our politics, but he said some things that are still relevant to this campaign:

— Governments deny, in order to survive, he said, what they promised in order to get a start.

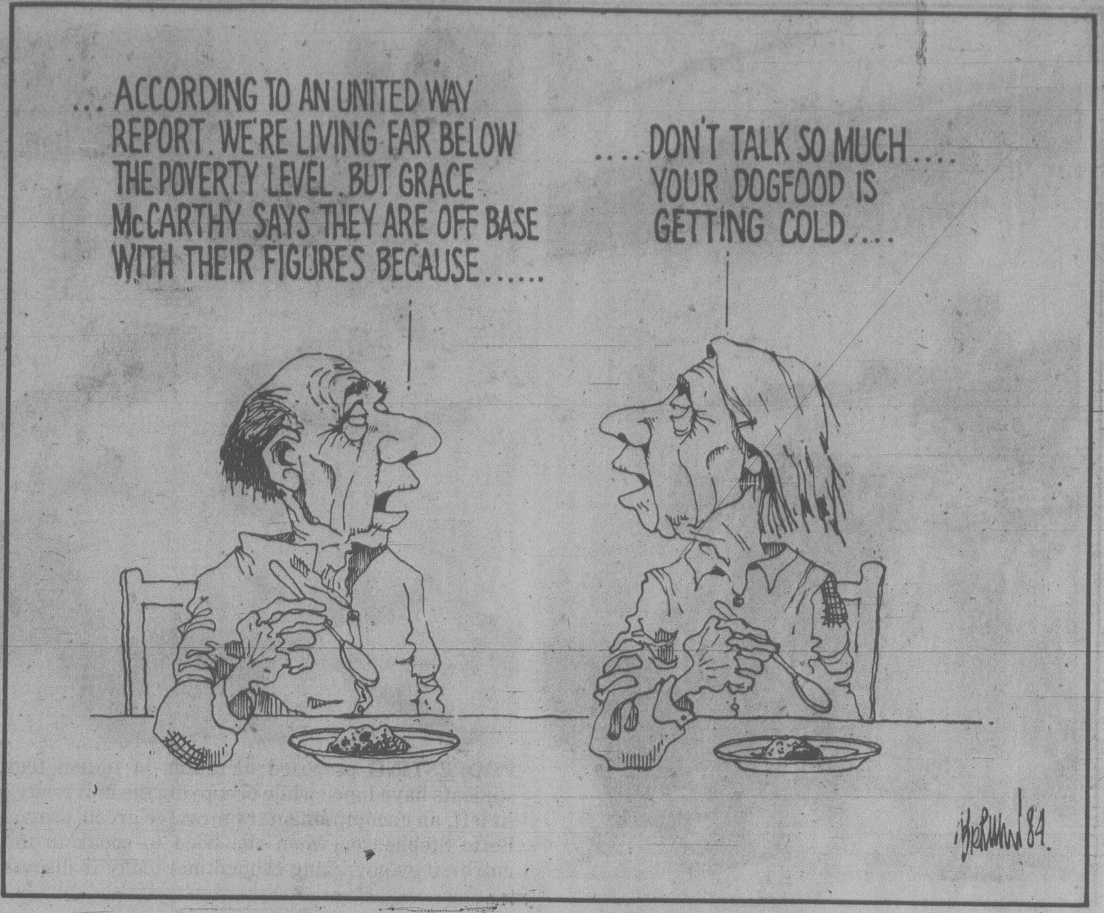
— All politics are founded on the indifference of the majority of those involved....

— Politics was at first the art of preventing people from minding their own business. A later age added the art of forcing people to decide things they did not understand.

Power struggle

— What, in short, is politics? Valery asked at the end. Politics consists, he concluded, in the will to gain and keep power; so it must exert either constraint or illusion over minds, which are the source of all power ... it wants to prevent the publication of those things not consonant with its exercise. It tries its best to misrepresent ... I confess: the spectacle of the world of politics makes me sick....

— Finally: "I think," says Valery, "all this is not without peril for our young people. Who is going to find them a new ideal to aspire toward with all their might?" This was the critical question Valery asked of politics in France almost 50 years ago, and it is still the paramount question of American politics today, only Valery asked it with more precision and grace than anybody else manages to do here at the beginning of the 1980s.



... ACCORDING TO AN UNITED WAY REPORT. WE'RE LIVING FAR BELOW THE POVERTY LEVEL. BUT GRACE McCARTHY SAYS THEY ARE OFF BASE WITH THEIR FIGURES BECAUSE......

Let him stay

I have been distressed by the series of articles appearing in the Times which tell of a Polish seaman, Mr. T. Jakubowski, and his struggle to remain in Canada.

On Feb 16 in your third page article, I read that his appeal has failed and that he must leave this country by Feb. 28.

I must make it clear that when this man returns to Poland, he will face harassment and imprisonment.

I am not of Polish origin, but I have lived in Poland and I have seen many examples of political repression. The current regime would not remain in power for one moment if it were not for the massive Soviet military presence there. What is happening in Afghanistan now has been happening in Poland for many, many years.

Perhaps this is not clear to the immigration officials who have made this decision. Perhaps they do not believe that this man will suffer if he is sent back.

Or, perhaps the government is only implementing the law. If this is the case, the law should be examined and I would like to ask that an exception be made.

Mr. Jakubowski is employed and will be a good citizen.

In Eastern Europe we are known as the free world. This is our image. Defectors come here with hope of gaining that freedom that better life. They come here with faith in us and in our political system. We must not betray that faith.

I make a plea to our government and to the Canadian public to allow this seaman to remain in Canada and to continue his life here. — Pamela Jane Smith, 16-130 Dallas Road.

Sabre rattling

We are alarmed by the sabre rattling that our politicians have been engaged in during the past election campaign. Canada has enjoyed a reputation as a peace-keeper in the world and our credibility as a peace keeper will be lost if our politicians follow President Carter's hawkish policy. Many influential Americans question President Carter's Middle East policy, considering it to be an over-reaction, and favor a more conciliatory stance.

Furthermore, the U.S. does not have a good reputation in foreign affairs, what with CIA meddling in Chile, and the Vietnam war. Are we to blindly follow U.S. policy, and wake up one morning engaged in another Vietnam, or even a nuclear war?

If we are to continue living on this planet, we must have peace, and Canada's role should be that of a peace-keeper. If Canada is to be a peace keeper, it is necessary to have an independent foreign policy based on working toward friendship and negotiation between all peoples of the world. Jumping on the Cold War bandwagon makes this impossible. — G. E. Doherty, Victoria Coalition For Disarmament, 1831 Fern Street.

Hard on parents

May we say that the closing of the Langwood Activity Centre in Langford, an old workshop building next to the Dogwood School, which was cheerfully operating for the older mentally handicapped "graduates" of that school, seems to cast a shadow on the generosity of the entire community around Victoria.

Some years ago I attended some pleasant tea-time evening "get-togethers" of the parents of these handicapped children along with one or two of the instructors who were of the school board employ. I was shown the interesting goods being currently produced in the Langwood workshop in the daytime . . . items of woodcraft, such as garden items like "planters" for putting flowers and plants in and the like; and much woolen goods done with their knitting as well as several other lines. The community is enriched by such undertakings. Many shops around the city and charity outlets handle these modest craft items.

Closing the centre and forcing the backward ones to stay home will be pretty hard on the parents — many of the latter who are senior citizens now — for they will have to give them their attention all the time and not get the usual rest or time-off as is necessary.

Also the habits and friendships built up by association at the centre by these children will be taken away. To say nothing of their modest 75 cents an hour pay and such little rewards to raise their spirits. — Maurice Corbett, 3437 Luxton Road.

Quality candidates

Reading the Times prior to the closing of the B.C. election polls an article relative to our threatened social environment captioned — "We Are A Chemical Society" — clearly points out problems far more vital to our health, welfare and possible existence than the importance of what political candidate is elected or what party forms the next government. The sad situation that exists in the political democratic system is that the majority of candidates comprised mainly of businessmen, lawyers and economists are completely ignorant of science and technology and therefore are incapable of recognizing the magnitude of risks involved in exploiting science and technology for the sake of profit at the risk of everyone's health.

Why do we vote for candidates who are not competent or versed in basic knowledge regarding the environment, energy, technology and science? Why do we not challenge their credentials to become managers of our affairs nationally or provincially? Until we challenge the competence of the candidates no search will be made by the political party managers to seek out candidates qualified to seek our vote and manage our affairs for the benefit of all.

The life you save is more important than the future of the political party or the candidate for whom we vote. — J. J. Gibson, 103-260 Michigan Street.

Value vows

With the nations of our world so unsure of where they stand now and what the future will hold, it seems very sad to me to see individual relationships falling apart as well.

One of the most sacred values held by mankind is the love between a man and a woman bound in matrimony. In the past two years I have seen several marriages fail, two of these in my own family.

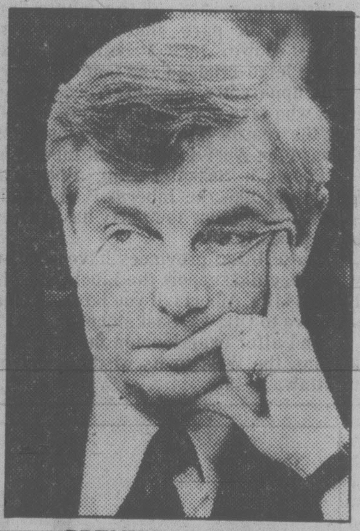
The question now, is why? Is it possible that these people just simply stopped loving each other? Personally I doubt this, for if this was the case there certainly would be much less emotional pain involved than there actually is. Is it that their problems are ones which can never be solved? This too, in most cases, is unlikely, since the power of love is such an absolute, strengthening one. Was not there a promise for better and for worse? Are these just words?

To me, the vows which I made to my husband on the day of our wedding are ones which I value now and always will. Whenever we run into problems I try to remember the great things we have had together and realize that I do not want to lose all of these over any kind of disagreement, whether is be large or small. I may be idealistic, but if being idealistic is going to keep my marriage a happy one, then why not? I believe that there is nothing we can't solve by working at it. No where in the vows did it say that marriage would be easy, at least not in the vows which we made. — Ginny McNally, 839 Wollaston Street.

Votes and oil

I read in your paper recently that Premier Bennett had chosen to be absent from our country just at the time when our federal election was about to take place but the most unbelievable part was that he, of all people, had neglected to cast his vote in the advance polls. It seems incredible that having achieved his position through our votes as head of one of the three most important provinces in Canada, he should deliberately neglect to cast his vote for the future government of Canada for the next years.

I also wonder if the Premier of Alberta has ever taken a long look at himself when reading of the billions of dollars the Arab states are acquiring through forcing the rest of the world to pay unrealistic prices for their oil. Is there not a real similarity between both cases? Should not his conscience give him at least a twinge by pointing out that he may be walking in their shoes?



PREMIER LOUGHEED
. . .shortchanging Canada

The great and only difference I can see is that the Arab states care for only themselves while this is Mr. Lougheed's own country and he is a Canadian. Who is the greater wrongdoer?

To me the whole subject of natural resources has been badly mismanaged. I feel that all these should belong to Canada as a whole and the profits from them, great or small, should be distributed proportionately between the rest of the provinces. In such a way one province cannot put away billions of dollars — I understand loaned at high interest rates — while others less fortunate must either do away with or cut back important services for their citizens to make ends meet. — M. Russell, Victoria.

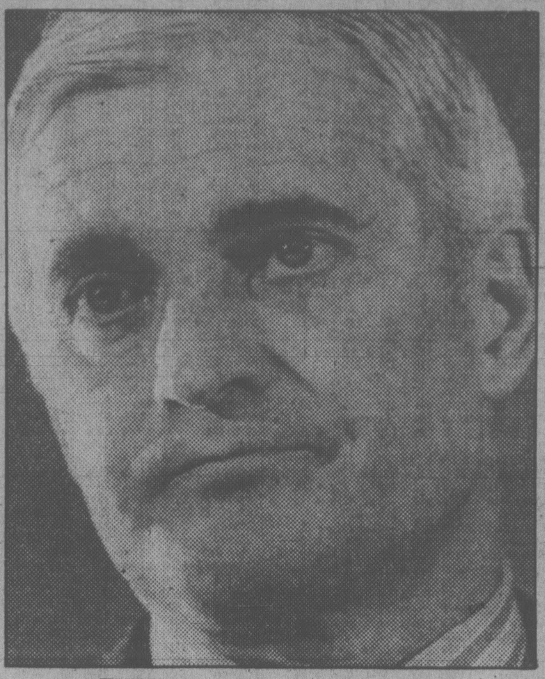
BROADBENT . . . he's not the NDP Moses



TURNER . . . will the call go out?

Troubles for Trudeau

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Early on election night those of us on the electronic media were talking Liberal "sweep." It seemed 155 to 160 seats were there for the Liberals. That would have been a sweep, a Parliament for four years in which the opposition dance of "no confidence" motions would be empty ritual. But the sweep stopped at the bounds of Northwestern Ontario. Yet I've noted no one remarking what a slim House margin the Grits have — five to six seats. Trudeau can hardly afford to elevate any non-Quebec MPs to the Senate.

Take a bitter Tory caucus which lost little of its experienced strength; an NDP caucus which, despite its Western imbalance, is youngish and aggressive; a Liberal caucus heavy in re-treads (for example, 22 ex-ministers from cabinets which seemed flat just a few years ago.)

Take a PM who's never been patient with the House, an unreformed set of parliamentary rules, a creaking economy, a confusion in energy policies, and mostly hostile provincial premiers.

It adds up to a government beset with difficulties and a nasty, recalcitrant Parliament, one in which the goverment whip will always be having to watch his votes. This simply cannot be a constructive Parliament, a healing Parliament. Victory was neither wide nor deep enough.

Almost as significant for the restored government of Mr. Trudeau as a vengeful, numerous opposition is the lack of goodwill, indeed the deep skepticism and mistrust of the the political journalists towards the prime minister, his advisers and the re-treads. No honeymoon!

Aside from the difficult, touchy situation in oil and gas pricing which Mr. Trudeau must deal with, the other subject area which draws him inevitably is federalism and the referendum and post-referendum situations in Quebec. None of us should discount the contribution he can make in this latter field, particularly if he and Claude Ryan can develop a rapport on the latter's proposals (the Beige Paper!) for a renewed federation. It remains, however, that any strong-willed confrontations pitting Trudeau against Levesque, or, even worse, against Ryan, will increase Western Canadian disenchantment with Trudeau and his government. Already there's a sizeable feeling in the West wrapped in phrases such as: "The sooner they go the better" and "Both Ontario and Quebec want to run the country."

And Broadbent's job may not be secure either

Despite the Liberal confidence that they know how to run Canada, that the Tories are inept and bunglers, despite the election evidence that the Liberals are still the majority federal party in Ontario, I think any neutral canvasser of our recent politics would come to the decision that it would have been wise for the Liberals to have left the Clark government in for a longer run. The inheritance, once past the sweet perquisites of power, is bleak. I shouldn't be surprised if by the spring of 1981 there isn't a feeling among Liberals that Mr. Trudeau should go and John Turner must be drafted in order to make them again a national party from sea to sea.

Another opinion I have on the current scene also goes against the grain of the immediate post-election comment. It is that the '80 election has been a disaster for the NDP, a repeat of 1974. They have less representation in Eastern Canada and the long-heralded breakthrough in Ontario seems as far away as ever.

It baffles me how the NDP caucus walked into the Liberal trap last December, just as they did in 1974.

I find it amusing that NDP spokesmen keep marvelling over the wonderful impact of Broadbent as leader this time and last year. Sure, he's likable as pumpkin pie; he comes through as decent and concerned, but surely it's clear that a campaign aping the other leaders and parties, right to a DC-9, and innumerable "photo opportunities" had little effect. Here was what seemed the best opportunity for a real NDP surge since 1962, and the "read-out" in the East (after all Broadbent is from Southern Ontario) was disastrous. After two tries it's clear that Broadbent isn't even a Moses to lead his party to the edge of the Promised Land, let alone take them into it.

Ever since David Lewis became leader the federal wisdom of the party has been to focus on economic issues, to talk industrial strategy and neo-Keynesian economics. The wide range of social, cultural, transporatation and communication issues which attract the interest of hundreds of thousands has been put well back in priority while the leader concentrated on a fuzzy kind of economic nationalism and the efficacy of economic planning.

At one time the CCF-NDP was in the vanguard of parliamentary reform and the interests of the disadvantaged and those without power and influence in the face of burgeoning power in the bureaucracies of government and private corporations. It has lost a lot of diversity and social evangelism since it gained the dubious support of the trade union leadership. "Dubious" is the word to use, simply because it is clear the organized trade union movement simply can't deliver much more than a smidgin of its membership in the East at the polls. Even more than the Tories, the NDP merits a self-examination.

Save the monsters!

LONDON — The great Viking exhibition that has just opened in London in a blaze of publicity has irritated the British a good deal. For here are our ancestral invaders, our rapers and pillagers, the sea-men who tore into the country with fire breathing from their nostrils, now suddenly being billed as a gentle, cultured, arty-crafty design-minded people who were no more given to raping and pillaging than anyone else.

It's not fair. They are removing all our ogre figures. We used to tremble in our shoes every time Richard III was mentioned, the evil hunchback who smothered the two little princes in the Tower. Then a bunch of eager historians, realizing you don't make much of a name for yourself by saying, "My, how bad is this baddie!" decided that the history books had all been written by his enemies and that he was a deeply misunderstood man. Just because he had a hunchback, poor fellow; obviously he'd been maligned; and the princes, why, they probably died of a bad cold or over-eating or something.

Where will it all end? Will we soon get a new view of Attila the Hun, making him out to be a sort of mittel-European Johnny Appleseed, merely spreading sweetness, light and cultural advance as he roared, sorry, persuaded his way across the Continent?

Is it going to turn out that the Conquistadores, up till now supposed to be about as foul a bunch of men as ever chopped off an enemy's head, were in fact on a benign mission to convert the Incas to Christianity? Of course, they actually said they were, but no one has ever been fool enough to believe them. Yet.

It is all most unsatisfactory. We need our diet of ancient horrors (and they must be ancient: Belsen and the Gulag Archipelago are a lot too real, too close). We like to shudder happily as we read of gruesomeness long gone. It comforts us that, though the electricity bill may be outrageous, the planet polluted, our children sniffing glue and scarcely a steadily married couple in sight, well, at least we aren't being carved up by somebody's long sword; we aren't being marched over by grisly bearded men whose breath smells of fish, treading our children under their feet and burning our hovels over our heads.

Nothing makes the bed seem warmer than reading a nice, long, cosy book about people up to their necks in the freezing mud of the trenches; nothing makes the bleak efficiencies of a modern hospital seem more bearable than remembering the six-to-a-bed foetid, fever-ridden ghastliness of a 19th century one; if you concentrate hard on the conditions of the old slave ships, even modern air travel can seem comparatively pleasant.

But they keep changing their minds about just what was horrible and what wasn't. While one lot seem to be intent on a rehabilitation job for just about every tyrant going, there's another lot at work cutting all our heroes down to size. Scott of the Antarctic, we've been recently told, may have had a heart of gold but was a lousy organizer; Winston Churchill was horrid to his Generals; George Washington kept slaves and had wooden false teeth — I don't know that the teeth make him morally any worse, of course, but they don't somehow seem to be the stuff of which heroes are made.

In my lifetime I've seen just about every historical line-up turned around. Instead of the noble settlers battling against the wicked Indians until rescued by the U.S. Cavalry, we have been made to realize how rotten it all was for the Indians. Instead of the glorious British Empire gradually civilizing the globe, we've been told to see them as just a bunch of avaricious businessmen backed up by battleships.

The Spartan stand at Thermopylae has lost its status as a heroic (if daft) determination to die rather than surrender, and become merely one more tactical move that didn't come off. Martin Luther King liked women, Martin Luther himself had hemorrhoids, Albert Schweitzer had piles of rusting equipment donated by the world that he couldn't be bothered to use, and Humphrey Bogart never actually said, "Play It Again, Sam."

I just wish all these accurate and nit-picking historians would leave my prejudices alone. It is quite enough trouble trying to work out the grey, uncertain, complicated balance between the nearly-right and not-quite-wrong on modern, immediate, urgent issues; would they please just leave history, at least, all neatly arranged in black and white the way it was?

Auto insurance agents, repairmen under the gun

By FRED CLEVERLEY

WINNIPEG — When the Conservative government of Manitoba announced that there would be no significant changes in the compulsory automobile insurance scheme, Autopac, that it inherited from the former New Democratic Party administration, two of the happiest groups of Manitobans were the private insurance agents and the operators of autobody repair shops.

It was ironic that those two groups are made up of individuals who campaigned against the establishment of a government insurance monopoly in Manitoba almost as hard as the Conservatives had done.

However, during the seven years that government insurance has been the law in Manitoba, the politicians have discovered that more people like it than dislike it, and the special interest groups such as the agents and repairmen have found it so financially attractive that they are reluctant to have as much as a comma of the legislation changed.

The most ironic thing about this change of attitude can be found in the possibility that, if the provincial government changes, and those responsible for instituting government insurance are returned to power, the most expendable groups in a drive toward greater efficiency and lower premiums will be the agents and the repairmen.

Several thousand insurance agents gathered on the lawn of the Manitoba legislature in 1970 to protest against Ed Schreyer's plan to have the government take over the insurance business. The impression they left was responsible, in part, for the private agency system to become an anomaly in Manitoba government insurance.

The harassed Schreyer administration, facing possible defeat on its insurance scheme, turned the private agents into mini licence bureaus in order to avoid the image of closing down private industry.

The scheme has proved to be expensive. The 350 licensed agents are paid about $7 million a year in commissions and registration fees for doing little more than ticking off squares on government-printed licence forms and remitting the premium money.

They are not even responsible for bad accounts. Licence and insurance cheques are made payable to the minister of finance, not the agency, and if they bounce the government chases the delinquent customer, after it has paid the agent his full commission.

Few supporters of government insurance think that motorists are getting $7 million worth of convenience from the agents, who stay open longer than normal government hours, and there is almost no way an agent can service or change the standard government insurance offering.

The whole operation could be handled by the government's licence bureau, which before Autopac was established was planning to stagger licence renewal dates to avoid the staffing problems that come with a single renewal date for all vehicles.

Besides the $7 million in agent fees, the former Manitoba government had its eye on the profit factor in the $70 million paid out each year to automobile repair shops. At one point, the former government suggested the establishment of a centralized, government-owned parts depot.

The suggestion was met by the Opposition with charges that the government was really planning to go into the repair business in a big way, eventually eliminating the private repair companies. At stake was another $10 to $15 million a year.

The Conservatives continued to fight the government insurance monopoly right up until the time they took office. They then created a review committee, which advised them to get out of the business and return the repair of automobiles to the private insurance industry.

The most recent announcement, that the government has no intention to do so in the foreseeable future, has left the insurance industry disappointed.

What the government may have accomplished, however, is to have laid the groundwork for future changes in Autopac that could be justified economically.

With no competitive factor, in which agents could service customers by representing different insurance companies, there is no real justification for the agents at all — the work can be handled by existing government machinery.

Without competition, the auto-repair business has no real restraint and has successfully bargained its revenue steadily upward. No other location in Canada offers repairmen the chance to get approval, on the telephone, from the single bank of government adjusters for extra repairs.

If the costs mount, some future government could decide that real control would exist only if government shops did the repairs. The savings of between $10 and $15 million, when added to the agent's commissions of $7 million, would make it possible for the government to chop about $50 off every insurance premium in the province.

If that is done, it will be interesting to see if the agents and repairmen continue to be as supportive of a government insurance monopoly as they appear to be now.

A landmark libel case?

By WILLIAM FRENCH
The Globe and Mail

Critics in general and book reviewers in particular will watch the course of a current libel action with more than random interest. Its outcome could, probably for the first time in Canada, set limits on how far reviewers can go in their critical observations on the object being reviewed and, more important, on its creator. While the action involves a book review, a decision could establish limits of fair comment in all areas of cultural criticism.

Richard Rohmer is suing Larry Zolf and certain principals of The Montreal Gazette as the result of Zolf's highly critical review last September of Rohmer's latest novel, Balls! In a statement of claim submitted to the Supreme Court of Ontario, Rohmer charges that the words used in the review indicate he is unfit and incompetent to be an author. He claims Zolf's words disparage and ridicule him as a person and an author, in effect injuring his character, credit, reputation, profession, income and income potential as an author.

In jest

The defendants claim in their statement of defence that the words used in Zolf's review "are not in their plain and ordinary meaning defamatory." They argue that the review was "fair comment on a matter of public interest, namely the literary merit of the novel Balls!" They note that parts of the review were written in jest, and that the review was not designed to injure Rohmer by implying incompetence or stupidity, nor by implying that the author possesses any particular attitude toward certain religions. They deny that Rohmer has suffered damages as a result of the review and point out that lost sales would have to be the result of uncomplimentary reviews in newspapers and magazines with wider circulation than The Gazette.

There is always the possibility in cases like this that an out-of-court settlement will be reached, which would mean that no precedent would be set to limit or expand the freedom of reviewers in future. When asked about this possiblity the other day, Rohmer said, "I'm a lawyer, and one of the things I have learned is that there is always an opportunity to settle. I am quite prepared to do so in this instance, and every opportunity should be explored." As to his reasons for launching the action, he said: "I don't mind criticism of my work; I've come to expect that. But stepping over the line relating to other matters is not acceptable. Beyond that, I must defend myself."

If the action does go to trial, it will likely be at least a year from now before it can be heard. The next step is examination for discovery.

Royal profit hits $78.6M

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada has announced its after-tax profit for the quarter ended Jan. 31, 1980, rose to $78.6 million, or $2.15 a share, from $77.1 million, or $2.11 a share for the corresponding period of 1979.

Total assets rose 22 per cent to $54.4 billion, while domestic earnings dropped 11 per cent to $45.7 million. International earnings jumped 28 per cent to $32.9 million and total deposits added 18 per cent to $47.7 billion.

Rowland C. Frazee, president and chief executive officer, noted the bank's taxable equivalent net interest revenue, or spread, declined sharply in the quarter. Although international percent spread registered some improvements, he said, domestic spread was hard hit by the growing gap between deposit costs and revenue from loans and investments.

Carter ducks pipeline bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration said Wednesday it remains opposed to any federal participation in a multibillion-dollar Alaska natural gas pipeline.

That message was given by Energy Secretary Charles Duncan to Alaska Gov. Jay Hammond.

The project, which President Carter has made a priority proposal to increase domestic supplies of natural gas, is stalled because Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., the consortium formed to build the 1,190-kilometre Alaska segment of the pipeline, has been unble to find adequate financing.

An energy department consultant had proposed that the federal government provide loan guarantees for more financing if cost overruns push the Alaska segment of the pipeline beyond $16 billion.

That proposal was made to encourage funding participation by the oil companies which own the natural gas. The pipeline company has said it does not have the resources to build the line without assistance from the gas producers.

The oil companies have been reluctant to put up the construction money because they are barred by the 1977 law authorizing the project from having an equity ownership in the line or being involved in its management.

Hammond said the energy department expects to hear within 10 days from the gas producers on whether they will reconsider their opposition and will at least be willing to fund the first $500 million needed to complete engineering and design work.

The Canadian portion of the line and two segments in the United States south of the Canadian border are not involved in the financing difficulties.

It's puzzling in the extreme to understand B.C. Hydro's need to raise electricity rates again, since in four weeks it will be free of the money-sucking transit operations in Victoria and Vancouver.

The red ink on transit which Hydro now absorbs should roughly balance the revenue from the seven per cent rate hike. Last year the losses on the buses hit $61 million, but soon the B.C. government and everyone who drives a car will be subsidizing transit out of the provincial treasury and with a three cent tax on every gallon of gas.

On April Fool's Day the regional districts and the Urban Transit Authority assume the burden, relieving Hydro of any responsibility for the unloved orphan.

Its new legal guardians are still arguing about paternity and child support payments, but that's another story and Hydro doesn't really care if there's a happy ending as long as somebody takes the buses off its hands.

Shedding transit is a $60 or $70 million windfall for the corporation. So, the question again. Having plugged this immense drain on its corporate finances why does Hydro still have to increase the price of electricity?

You can argue details with Allan Purdy and his cultural funding subcommittee, but their contentious report on the financial picture of local theatre and musical organizations carries a message of pure common sense that ought to have been delivered long ago.

The reactions of some of the groups criticized has been to aim for Purdy the man. He's been pictured as some sort of presumptuous artistic busybody poking his nose in where he's not wanted, a businessman without a shred of sensitivity.

Some of the cultural commissars who were quick with the catty remarks ought to remember the recommendations were a collective effort by six individuals who are not exactly strangers to the local cultural scene. Some of them wanted to make even stronger remarks about the financial affairs of some organizations.

There's no accounting for personal taste in in drama or music, and someone else might have picked six others with equally long careers in the performing arts or cultural administration. But they know what they're talking about.

They were chosen by aldermen from the four municipalities and together decided it was time to tell some groups the facts of life. The real surprise is that so many were surprised at what they said.

A measure of accountability, with arts groups being held to some standards of fiscal performance, is hardly a revolutionary concept. With public funding of the arts in Victoria from all levels of government standing at $2 million a year, it's the minimum expected by the people who pay the bills.

They have the right to argue that this musical group or that theatre troupe didn't get enough money or the committee got some facts wrong. (Although the committee depended entirely on briefs from the grant-seekers for financial information).

But someone who drinks as deeply from the public trough as, say, the symphony or the Bastion Theatre, should know better than to get worked up when duly-appointed representatives of the public ask a few questions about how their money is spent.

They consider themselves professionals but you'd never have guessed it from the hysteria generated in the arts community in the last week. Judging by the reaction, they found the right targets.

Why encourage a thief? Women on left and right are inviting trouble while the pedestrian above is close to the appproved position . . . carrying the purse well tucked in

Purse thieves find it easy

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Victoria police today issued a warning to women: take more precaution on the street if you want to keep your purses.

And while there is little anyone can do to prevent the crime entirely, city police officers have launched a campaign to tell women, particularly the elderly, to be more wary.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the detective branch, says there have been 12 cases reported in the city in the past four months.

The victims were in their 60s and 70s. One was in her 80s and one, robbed of $30 as she was walking down a lane in the 1400-block Stadacona last Nov. 11, was 90.

Fortunately, says Stewart, there have been no serious injuries but one 64-year-old woman attacked by a trio of youths at Tolmie and Rutledge Jan. 24 and robbed of her purse containing $6 suffered a fractured left wrist and broken nose when she fell face down to the curb.

Another woman, 66, received a bruised elbow when she became the victim of an attempted purse-snatching on Belmont near Haultain Dec. 2, and a 62-year-old woman twisted her ankle and bruised her knee when two youths tried to wrench her purse out of her arm Feb. 18 in front of 940 Humboldt.

Stewart says there is no way of telling what long-term effect the experience may have on them. All suffered varying degrees of shock.

The culprits in each case, says Stewart, were believed to be juveniles. As the attacks were so swift, and occurred at dusk or night, descriptions were rarely obtained.

Only two arrests have been made. Two 14-year-old boys were charged with an attempted purse-snatching Dec. 20 on Alder near Reed. And three 15-year-olds have been charged with another attempted robbery of a 73-year-old woman in the 900-block North Park on Feb. 15.

Police are investigating the trio in connection with an incident Feb. 3 in which an 81-year-old woman had her purse containing $10 yanked from her arm as she walked home in the 1000-block Pendergast.

Stewart says he's particularly concerned about the attitudes of kids arrested for such crimes.

Recently officers interviewed one boy who admitted he'd been a party to a couple of attacks.

The boy said his group staked out an apartment where elderly people were living.

It was, he told the officers, "easy pickings."

Police are determined to make the crime — generally regarded as the most cowardly of offences — anything but easy.

Officers are talking to senior citizen groups and community organizations to try to get women to be more cautious.

They suggest women carry only small amounts of money. If they have to go out at night they should stick to well-lighted paths and walk with a companion.

They should use small purses, preferably tucked from view under the arm.

Purses should never be carried dangling from the hand and straps of purses shouldn't be wound around the hand or shoulder.

While the crime prevention brochures advise victims of an attack not to resist, Stewart says that is impractical as no women is going to give up her purse without some struggle.

Of the 12 women attacked in the latest series of snatchings, seven managed to cling on to their handbags.

"I think the best advise is to resist to a point," says Stewart. "But if the woman is threatened, of course, she should let go."

Noel called on road plan

A highways ministry spokesman today denied a claim by Ald. Sandy Noel of Saanich that the ministry purchased land for a McKenzie-Pat Bay Highway interchange.

Several properties were purchased for road-widening as part of the $7 million highway extension project, the spokesman claimed.

None were bought for an interchange, he said.

Noel said Wednesday the ministry prepared a set of plans for the interchange and started buying property.

Earlier this week Noel said the interchange was scrapped at the last minute because of pressure from Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, the MLA for Saanich-The Islands, and former mayor of Saanich.

But the spokesman restated today a rough interchange design was drawn up at Saanich's insistence to show council what could be done in future.

Noel says Saanich didn't ask for the design and that it was more comprehensive than council anticipated.

Gov't-run jetfoil ideal, says Bawlf

Sam Bawlf said today it would be ideal if the government were to run a jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle.

But if private enterprise operates such a service, Bawlf said he's positive it could operate profitably without government subsidies.

Bawlf, a former cabinet minister, said the only government help a private jetfoil group might seek would be a loan from the B.C. Development Corporation, something many new business look for.

Bawlf's comments came after it was alleged Wednesday the government orchestrated the demise of the Princess Marguerite to pave the way for "friends of the government" to establish a jetfoil service to Seattle.

Esquimalt-Port Renfrew NDP MLA Frank Mitchell said replacing the Marguerite with the smaller, slower Queen of Prince Rupert was to ensure adequate business for the jetfoil service.

Mitchell predicted the project's backers will seek government subsidies.

Bawlf said a jetfoil group would probably want the government to make a policy statement supportive of jetfoil service.

"Obviously no private company is going to invest $25 million in a jetfoil system this year if the government intends to put on the Queen Mary next summer to skim off the peak tourist trade," he said.

Bawlf also said a large ship running to Seattle once a day is not an answer to the problem of bringing tourists to Victoria.

He likened the insistence on one big ship making a single run a day to Air Canada being asked to put a single 747 jumbo jet on the Victoria-Vancouver run in the summer months only.

With the smaller jetfoils, the number of vessels and trips could be cut back to accommodate the reduced business in the winter months but the service wouldn't be closed down completely as is now the practice with a single, large vessel on the run.

Bawlf said he has no financial interest in any group promoting jetfoil service though he said he wouldn't hesitate to invest in such a group.

Jetfoils, manufactured by Boeing in Seattle, are in short supply.

Bawlf also ridiculed Mitchell's suggestion of re-equipping the Princess Marguerite with modern diesels.

"I don't think Mr. Mitchell knows what a difference dieself engines would make to a hull as old as the Marguerite," Bawlf said. "Diesels would shake her to pieces."

Asked what he'd do if he were in government, Bawlf said he'd run the Marguerite ashore, refurbishing her to include duty-free stores, tourist shops, eating spots.

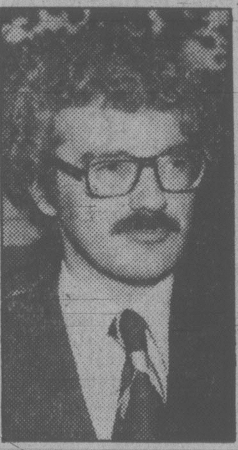
Meanwhile, Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe said he's going to introduce a motion at tonight's council meeting urging the provincial government to reconsider its decision to put the Queen of Prince Rupert on the Seattle run.

Blencoe fears having the Queen of Prince Rupert on the run will cost Greater Victoria $10 million a year in lost revenue.



Gallery director resigns

The director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has quit.

Roger Boulet, director for the past five years, said in his letter of resignation problems between some trustees and himself had created apparently insoluble difficulties.

A gallery spokesman said today the board has not yet met to consider the resignation and a move is under way to persuade Boulet to stay.

Gallery board chairman Dr. Burton Kurth, who said he was speaking as an individual member, said he deeply regrets Boulet's resignation.

"The gallery has made excellent progress in all areas under Mr. Boulet's direction. At all times its welfare and reputation has come first with him and its present status is a testimony to his ability and concern."

Boulet said in a prepared statement he will continue to support the gallery and to assist it in any way he can.

Two holdups linked?

Two armed robberies in Victoria on Wednesday may be connected.

A city police spokesman said no definite link has been established but there are some features in common with the descriptions of the robbers.

Wallis Food Market, 3189 Quadra, was held up around noon, and Willows Park Grocery Store, 2405 Eastdowne, shortly after 9 p.m.

The first robbery netted $190, the second $305.

League attacks poll on abortion

By BRENDA DALGLISH

An attempt has been made to prejudice the medical staff at Victoria General Hospital on the abortion controversy, a pro-abortion campaigner charged Wednesday.

Jennifer Lowen, president of the local branch of Canadian Abortion Rights Action League, criticized the wording of a poll on the work of the VGH abortion committee, and a letter to staff doctors.

A poll of the doctors is being carried out to get their opinion of the abortion committee's rejection of almost every application it's received since it began working early in January.

The results of the poll, which was conducted among 200 doctors, will be counted Monday or Tuesday.

Dr. Don Carlow, VGH medical director, defended the poll, saying it is a simple question that asks if the present activities of the abortion committee are either appropriate or too strict. There is also space on the form for comments.

But Lowen said the poll calls for the medical staff to make a judgment on fellow doctors — something professionals tend to be reluctant to do — rather than addressing the direct question of abortion.

The question was phrased in a way that supports the committee, she said, because it's generally easier to choose a positive statement like "appropriate" rather than a negative like "too strict."

Lowen also objected to a letter signed by the three members of the abortion committee on VGH stationery and sent to all staff doctors just a day before the poll was distributed.

She claimed it was misleading and an effort to sway the doctors.

Carlow said the committee's letter was on hospital stationery because it's a committee of the hospital.

He questioned the abortion league's protest.

"What business is it of their's? This is an internal hospital matter."

Dr. David Ripley, a member of the committee, said the letter was sent to inform the medical staff of the committee's actions and position so that an informed decision could be made — not as an attempt to prejudice the doctors.

The letter said it was forwarded "to explain to our colleagues the position we have taken in this recent controversy."

"We have tried to screen applications for significant hazards to the patient's health," the letter says. "On this basis we have passed women with phlebitis, diabetes, physical immaturity, serious psychiatric disease and for reasons of sexual assault. We found, however, that the vast majority of applications were being made on social or economic grounds and we did not feel that these reasons justified abortion."

But Lowen objected to the definition of health that the doctors, (Ripley, H.J. Calder and John Cooper), included. She said the letter identified a definition of health as one developed by the World Health Organization but in fact it was only part of that organization's definition.

The letter went on to state: "There are no easy solutions for the unplanned pregnancy. In recent years there has been growing pressure from some groups in society for abortion on demand. We do not feel that this can be justified medically, legally or ethically.

"We do not acknowledge that we have an obligation to alter our principles on abortion or any other important medical issue simply to keep abreast of changing public opinion. We have reason to believe that our position has broad support among our colleagues."

Target: tax defaulters

Property owners who default on their municipal taxes may soon face stiffer penalties.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today the government is considering tying the interest penalty for late payments to the current bank interest rate.

At present a municipality may charge a maximum of only 10 per cent per annum on late tax payments. That is almost five per cent lower than the bank would charge if the money was borrowed.

"Our thought is that the penalty should be tied into the current interest rates to allow for fluctuations," Vander Zalm said.

max low

Tall, slender and attractive, Kathy Shields sits in the McKinnon Gymnasium bleachers at the University of Victoria and talks about her Cinderellas.

Though it's obvious now that all the glass slippers fit and the girls have left the cinders on the hearth to be transformed into the princesses of basketball, coach Kathy won't say that her Vikettes will win their prince charming in the form of the elusive Canadian universities championship.

You see, they came so close last time that she's afraid to say too much lest midnight comes and the dream is gone . . .

"We were really young this time a year ago," Kathy says distantly as she watches husband Ken coach his Viking men's team. "We had a lot of rookies and lost seven Canada West league games.

"Still, we finished second to Calgary with a 13-7 record — they were 16-4 — and we won the first game of the best-of-three playoffs in Calgary. We lost the second game and in the decider on the Sunday, we were edged by one point 71-70."

And so Calgary went to the nationals in Regina as the Canada West rep but all wasn't over for the Vikettes, who sneaked in as one of two wild card teams.

"We were called the Cinderella team," Kathy remembers with a grin.

But, while the Canada West champion Calgary Dinnies were going down to Guelph in the eight-university, single-knockout tournament, Kathy and her Cinderella Vikettes were upsetting Winnipeg in the first round.

"In the semi-finals, we beat Guelph 51-50 but there was a protest that the scorer had missed a hoop that Guelph had scored," Kathy explains. "It was one of the biggest controversies in Canadian basketball but they decided that, yes, a basket had been missed and that we would have to play the last eight minutes of the game again the following morning."

That was because the hoop that was missed was eight minutes from the end of the original game. Anyway, the Vikettes won by two points in overtime and suddenly, the Cinderellas found themselves in the national final.

The grand ball was over, though, later that same night when the Victoria girls lost to Laurentian of Sudbury, Ontario, after two overtime periods.

Now, it's time for the Vikettes to try all over again. Only this time the slipper is on the other foot. This time, if they beat Calgary Dinnies in their best of three playoffs in the McKinnon (7 p.m. Friday, 7:45 p.m. Saturday and, if necessary, 2 p.m. Sunday) they will go to the nationals the following weekend at Halifax's Dalhousie University not as the Cinderellas but as the hot favorites after an incredible season that has seen them lose only once in 37 games and has earned them the No.1 ranking in the country.

Still, Kathy Shields, for five years a member of the Canadian national women's basketball team and Laurentian University's athlete-of-the-year in 1975-76, knows anything can happen in a tournament. That's why she isn't predicting too much.

"My main concern right now is the playoffs here and if we win those you can be sure we'll be trying awfully hard in Halifax," she explains.

Really, she says, that's all one can expect.

"My philosophy is we're going to try as hard as we can and, as long as the girls do that, then that's all I can ask for."

UVic has never won the national universities title in women's basketball. But that's not surprising. Few teams have, in fact. Two to be exact — Laurentian, which captured the title for the fifth straight time in winning last year, and before that, UBC Thunderettes.

Kathy Shields hopes her Vikettes will be the third.

Who knows? Now that the Cinderellas have gone, perhaps this will be the year for the Princesses from the Pacific . . .

Bennett opens Games

KIMBERLEY — Praising the community spirit involved in organization, Premier Bill Bennett officially opened the B.C. Winter Games Wednesday night.

"I think the organizing committee could teach the Lake Placid Olympic committee a thing or two," Bennett told about 2,500 spectators and competitors at the civic arena in this East Kootenay city.

"And nobody is boycotting these Games," he added.

Bennett noted that there are more than 2,000 local volunteers involved in the second annual winter competition — from a city of about 7,500.

Area students are enjoying a bonus five-day weekend because schools have been converted into dormitories to house the 1,000 athletes and officials for each of the two-day sessions.

Activities started today and continue Friday in the broomball, figure skating, alpine skiing, volleyball, weightlifting, fencing, judo, racquetball and table tennis competitions.

On Saturday and Sunday, badminton, bowling, curling, hockey, karate, cross-country skiing, basketball, diving and gymnastics competitions will be staged.

Various segments of the competition have also been scheduled at nearby Cranbrook and Marysville.

Tonight in sports

Playoffs in both basketball and hockey dominate the sports picture tonight on southern Vancouver Island.

Action started earlier this afternoon in the Vancouver Island "AA" high school boys' basketball championship at McKinnon Gymnasium and continues with games between Courtenay Towhees and Parkland Panthers at 5:30, Belmont Braves and Port Alberni Chieftains at 7:15 and Nanaimo Islanders and Oak Bay Bays at 9.

DataTech takes on Western Equipment in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at 9 in Cedar Hill Junior High.

In hockey, Juan de Fuca Merchants meet Esquimalt Maple Leafs at 7:15 and Western Homes Buckaroos tangle with Victoria Athletics at 9:15 in second games of best-of-five South Island Big Six League semi-final series at Pearkes Arena.

Fuller Lake Flyers and Oak Bay Trios square off in the second game of a best-of-three South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League semi series at 8 in Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Oilers end four-game slide

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers improved their National Hockey League playoff prospects Wednesday night, halting a four-game losing streak with a 5-2 victory over the Black Hawks in Chicago.

Ron Chipperfield, Pat Price, Dave Semenko, Lee Fogolin and Stan Weir scored for the Oilers, who led 4-0 midway through the game. Rick Preston and Ron Sedelbauer replied for the Hawks, who lost only their third game in the last 14.

"We needed this one and were able to beat a team that has lost only one game at home in their last 10," said a contented Glen Sather, coach of the Oilers. "While we have been struggling, we have to realize that we only average 21 years of age and have been able to compete as a first-year team on almost an equal basis most nights."

In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Colorado Rockies 4-3, Boston Bruins defeated Hartford 6-3, Pittsburgh Penguins shaded Winnipeg Jets 3-2, New York Islanders beat Quebec 5-3, New York Rangers sqeaked past Los Angeles Kings 5-4 and Philadelphia Flyers tied Buffalo Sabres 1-1.

If playoffs began today, the Oilers would be in — they've 52 points with 17 games left in the 80-game schedule. But Hartford Whalers, Quebec Nordiques, Detroit Red Wings, Vancouver Canucks and Washington Capitals all have points totals slightly better or close to the Oilers — and have games in hand over Edmonton. Only three of the six teams arelikely to make it to the playoffs.

Fogolin's goal and assist were an added spark to the Oilers. The lanky defenceman had scored four goals in 63 previous games and only nine over a six-year NHL career.

"The fact that I don't score much doesn't bother me a bit and the coach knows I get paid for hard-nosed defence," said Fogolin. "The opportunities were there tonight and I tried to pull some fancy manoeuvres on (Chicago goaltender Tony) Esposito and tonight I got away with it. Other nights I won't."

Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky had two assists to give him 102 points — four behind Montreal Canadiens' Guy Lafleur and 16 behind league-leader Marcel Dionne.

Toronto goaltender Jiri Crha had Colorado coach Don Cherry shaking his head in disbelief after the Rockies, outshooting the Leafs 45-21, trudged to their dressing room a loser. Rookie Laurie Boschman scored twice, giving him 16 so far this season, and Wilf Paiement (Goal No. 20) and Bill Derlago once each for the Leafs.

Peter McNab scored three times, increasing his season's total to 27 goals, to pace Boston to the win in Hartford, Conn., where poor ice caused problems.

"The ice was a factor and we're lucky we can put 19 healthy hockey players on the bus and leave town in one piece," said Boston coach Fred Creighton, irate over the playing conditions.

Jones takes first loss

EDMONTON (CP) — Colleen Jones will have to wait a little longer to see if her Halifax rink can cruise into a berth in the final Saturday of the Canadian women's curling championship.

Jones nearly had a spot in the title match in her grasp Wednesday night but it eluded her as Nova Scotia went down 8-5 to Barb Davis of Lethbridge in the ninth round, the first defeat in eight games for Jones.

A win would have put Nova Scotia out of reach of second-place Alberta in the 11-draw round-robin section. But now Jones's record drops to 7-1, while Davis climbs to 6-3, setting the stage for a possible tie-breaking game for top spot if Jones loses her last two games today and Davis wins her only remaining encounter.

Marj Mitchell of Regina, with wins against Quebec and New Brunswick Wednesday, is in third place and with two games left could tie either Alberta or Nova Scotia, depending on the outcomes of their games. There could also be a three-way tie for first or a wide combination of ties for the other two playoff spots, forcing tie-breaking games on Friday after the round-robin winds up.

"I think everybody that goes through a championship like is is going to lose sooner or later," said Jones, who all along has placed little importance on her rink's unbeaten streak. "But it's disappointing to have lost, knowing that if we had won we would've clinched a spot in the final."

Davis, who also beat Elayne Thomson of Crapaud, P.E.I., 8-6 in the eighth round Wednesday afternoon, broke a 5-5 tie by taking three in the ninth end and running Jones out of rocks in the 10th.

In other ninth-round games, the Territories, skipped by Cathy Shaw, got by Dorothy Crowe of St. Bruno, Que., 9-6 in an extra end; Mitchell beat Denise Lavigne of Moncton, N.B., 8-5; Sue Anne Bartlett of Labrador City defeated Christine Bodogh of St. Catharines, Ont., 6-4 and Donna Brownridge of Winnipeg took Thomson of P.E.I. 11-2 in six ends.

In the eighth round; Newfoundland beat New Brunswick 10-8, Manitoba defeated the Territories 10-7 and Nova Scotia dumped Joan Dexter of New Westminster, B.C., 12-1, stealing six in the sixth end to finish the game.

Behind Nova Scotia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, the Territories lies fourth with a 5-4 record, while Ontario, Manitoba and B.C. are at 4-4. Newfoundland is 4-5 while Quebec and New Brunswick are 3-5, with P.E.I. at 1-7.

Speedway backed on rec plan

Western Speedway (1966) Ltd. plans further expansion of facilities on 64 acres at Millstream Road in Langford.

The Capital Regional District's local planning and zoning committee agreed Wednesday that a bylaw be prepared and the project be carried out under a development permit.

The directors were told there is also a possibility of having horse racing or dog racing in the future.

The speedway currently operates for about five months of the year as a race track for many forms of wheel sports and the grandstand facility has recently been upgraded to meet current building standards.

The total development program is expected to cost $15 million.

Chief community planner J.G. Masterton warned, however, that consideration should be given to restricting the recreational vehicle campground to accessory use only, such as for track users only.

Games never in doubt: Killanin

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, was quoted Thursday as saying the Moscow Summer Games "have never been in doubt" in spite of threatened boycott by some countries and criticized political interferences by the United States and Soviet sides.

"It is a pity that Olympics take place in the same year of U.S. presidential elections. I could be wrong but it is my impression President Jimmy Carter would have acted in another way without elections at the doors," Lord Killanin was quoted as saying in an interview to Milan's Gazzetta Dello Sport, Italy's largest sports newspaper.

President Carter has called for the United States to boycott the Moscow Olympics.

Killanin was quoted as saying:

"The approach of politicians toward Olympic games is wrong. I think President Carter should have consulted the U.S. Olympic Commitee before taking any action. At the same time it is unacceptable that the Soviet government claims that Olympics are a recognition for its foreign policy. Olympic games have been granted to Moscow for what the Soviet Union has done in sport and for sports since 1952".

Golden Jet and Mr.Elbows together — at last!

BOBBY HULL
. . . acquired by Whalers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bobby Hull and Gordie Howe — the Golden Jet and Mr. Elbows — together. Ten years ago that idea would have struck fear in the hearts of opposing goalies.

Now it's a storybook ending to the closing years of two of the greatest offensive players in professional hockey history.

Hull, 41, is to join Howe, 51, in Hartford, Conn., after Winnipeg Jets traded him Wednesday to the Whalers for future considerations.

Hull has been sidelined since he suffered a shoulder injury last Dec. 12 when he rushed a comeback try with Winnipeg after sitting out most of last season while the Jets were in the World Hockey Association.

He has been recuperating in Florida and will skate with the Whalers at a practice today, Hartford officials said, adding that Hull probably will be in uniform early next month.

"They tell me he is full of enthusiasm and wants to play," said Hartford coach Don Blackburn. "If he can contribute, it will be a big plus for us down the stretch."

John Ferguson, Jets general manager, said in a prepared statement that Hull had approached him last week and indicated he was ready to resume play, but in the United States.

"A man of Bobby's stature can only be good for hockey," Ferguson said. "We have accepted his desire to play in the U. S. and wish him nothing but success in Hartford."

Acquisition of Hull means the Whalers have the only two men to have scored more than 1,000 goals each in professional hockey. Howe has scored 1,068 goals in regular season and playoff games. Hull has 1,016.

"Bobby can really help us," Hartford captain Rick Ley said. "He will be an asset for us and will definitely help us secure a playoff position."

About the only question to be answered is who will wear jersey No. 9 on the Whalers. That is the number worn by Howe.

"I think that's a moot point right now," Blackburn said. "I don't expect to have any problems with Bobby. The older players on this team come to the rink prepared to go and have a lot of pride. I'm not too worried about Hull, believe me."

Hull began his 23-year career with Chicago Black Hawks in 1957 and in his 15 years with the Black Hawks, he scored 604 goals during the regular season play and added another 62 in the playoffs.

In 1972 he shocked the hockey world by jumping to the fledgling WHA, signing a multi-year, million-dollar contract with the Jets. The move gave some much-needed credibility to the new league in its battle with the established NHL.

With Winnipeg the last seven years, he scored 303 goals during the regular season and added another 43 in playoffs.

This season the Golden Jet scored just four goals and added six assists in 18 games before injuring his shoulder. He was the last member of the original Jets' team to still be playing in Winnipeg.

With the Jets of the WHA, Hull had three plus 50-goal years including his 77-goal campaign during the 1974-75 season.

He won the Art Ross Trophy as the NHL's leading scorer three times; the Hart Trophy as the league's most valuable player twice; and the Lady Byng Memorial Trophy for being the most gentlemanly player once.

Forwards carry Tide hopes

By MAX LOW

Forward might will be pitted against fleet-footed backs Saturday in what could well prove to be the game that decides the provincial inter-union rugby championship for the McKechnie Cup.

And coach Don Burgess hopes his Vancouver Island Rugby Union Crimson Tide Reps can muster enough of that might up front to make up for all the speed in the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds' backline when the sides clash at 2:30 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

"UBC has a very good backfield including Canadian national team fullback Graham Taylor and centre Andrew Bibby, also a national rep," Burgess points out. "But they are only two of them. The rest are fast and the whole line runs and works well together. They are very dangerous backs and we have to keep the ball away from them."

To do that, the coach is counting on his experienced forwards — particularly Hans de Goede and Chris Fowler in the lineouts and his powerful front row of K.C. Walt, Larry Chung and Ron McInnes in the scrums — to make sure the UBC team as a whole sees as little of the ball as possible.

The big problem facing Burgess, however, is that his own backline is hurting.

"Paul Monahan of Oak Bay Wanderers injured his knee badly against Castaways last week, requiring 12 stitches in a cut, and he'll be out for about three weeks," the coach explains.

Fullback Jim Wenman is also suffering from a possible muscle strain in one leg and is a question mark for Saturday but Burgess still believes if his forwards can dominate the UBC pack, his backline will be able to score tries.

"We'll sock it to them in the forwards and then get the ball out for our three quarters to do the scoring," he says.

De Goede will captain the Tide for the first time and the rest of the forwards in the starting lineup are Brad Miles of James Bay, Don Carson of Oak Bay and UVic's very mobile Gary Grant. The backline is nearly all from UVic — Pat Trelawny at standoff-half, Brooke Smith and Greg Smith as centres and Jamie Hawthorne on the wing — with Daryl Noulette of James Bay at scrum-half, Chuck Shergold of James Bay on the other wing and Wenman, if he's fit, at fullback.

In the first round of the McKechnie Cup competition, the defending-champion Thunderbirds beat Fraser Valley 22-9 and the Tide, which last won the cup two years ago, nipped Vancouver Reps 10-7.

In theory, even if the Tide beats the 'Birds there is still the outside chance of a tie in the four-team tourney. If UBC then went on to defeat Vancouver and the Tide was to lose to Fraser Valley in their match in Victoria Mar.29, the Thunderbirds and the Island Reps would be tied for first place. But that's only in theory. If the Island players can win this one, they've just about got the cup in their back pocket.

In a preliminary match at Macdonald Park at 12:30 p.m., the Junior Tide (under-19) plays UBC juniors.

Cougars benefit in two of three

Two of Wednesday's three Western Hockey League results benefited Victoria Cougars but the one they wanted most did not turn out to their advantage.

Billings Bighorns upset the Pats 6-4 in Regina and Brandon Wheat Kings, sparked by Don Gillen's three goals, beat Calgary Wranglers 5-4.

The Eastern Division results helped both Victoria and Portland Winter Hawks to improve their chances of claiming the overall points championship and the important home-ice advantage in the playoffs.

Unfortunately for the Cougars, Lethbridge Broncos couldn't finish off a perfect night, from a Victoria standpoint. The Broncos got four goals from Doug Morrison but suffered defensively and dropped an 8-4 verdict to the Winter Hawks before 8,035 fans in Portland.

As a result, Hawks padded their hold on first place in the Western Division to three points over Victoria. Cougars, however, now have four games in hand.

Meanwhile, the schedule for the 1980 Memorial Cup series was announced Wednesday.

The WHL champions will play host to the Ontario and Quebec winners in the national showdownseries.

The first three games of the round-robin series will be played in Brandon May 4, 5 and 6, with the next three games in Regina May 7, 8 and 9. The championship game will be played in Regina May 11.

Troubled Titans call it a season

Victoria Titans, plagued with a poor player turnout and a 0-3 record, have opted out of the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

The defection leaves the league with nine teams and all of the remaining Titan matches will stand as forfeits.

In matches Wednesday, Mt. Douglas Mountainmen and Claremont Spartans battled to a 3-3 deadlock, Belmont Braves earned their first win with a 24-0 decision over Stelly's Stingers and Reynolds Roadrunners topped Esquimalt Dockers, 8-4.

Dan Hammick kicked a late penalty goal to earn the tie for Spartans, who slipped into first place ahead of idle Oak Bay Barbarians. Colin Ayers booted the penalty goal for Mountainmen.

Steve Percival scored two tries and booted a convert to lead the Belmont attack while Terry Burns, Tom Kind and Russ Peterson counted one try each and Alan Naylor kicked another convert.

Rob Kirkpatrick scored one try for Reynolds, who collected their other points on a try from a T-scrum in the second half. Cory Hooper scored a try for Esquimalt.

Senior 'B' hoop playoffs at UVic

Five teams from the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League will be battling in the Vancouver Island championships starting Friday at the University of Victoria's old gymnasium.

Henderson's Realty, which has clinched first place in the league, will be competing along with second-place Cuckoo Clock.

Other league entrants are defending-champion Strathcona Ivy's Discos and DataTech, currently deadlocked for third place, and fifth-place Trilec Seniors.

Courtenay, Nanaimo and Port Alberni are the up-Island entries for the tourney in which the top three squads earn berths in the British Columbia championship next month in Kamloops.

Ivy's, Victoria Athletics and Courtenay made the trip last year and Ivy's bowed in the provincial final to Kamloops.

Play starts at 9 p.m. Friday with Ivy's taking on Trilec Seniors and resumes at 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Sunday. The final of the double-loss elimination tourney is scheduled for 3 p.m., or 4:30 if necessary, Sunday.

In league games Wednesday, Cuckoo Clock edged Ivy's 80-77 at S.J. Willis Junior High School and Trilec Seniors topped Trilec Juniors 78-68 at Central Junior High.

Mike Gains set the pace for Cuckoos with 22 points and Dave Mulcahy added 20. Brian Sutherland-Brown topped Ivy's with 24 points and Dave Morgan added 19.

Seniors were sparked by 22 points from Ken Weins and 20 from Darrell Johnston while Walt Christianson led Juniors with 15.

Oak Bay sticking to upset manner

Oak Bay Trios, who completed the regular saeason on an upset note, and Victoria Athletics drew first blood while Esquimalt Maple Leafs and Juan de Fuca Merchants reached a stalemate as playoffs opened Wednesday in two southern Vancouver Island hockey leagues.

Trios surprised Fuller Lake Flyers 5-4 in the opener of a best-of-three semi-final series of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League at Fuller Lake Arena in Chemainus. In their final league game, Trios upset firstplace Saanich Braves.

Ken Buna scored the winning goal at 12:32 of the third period. The first period ended in a 3-3 tie and Oak Bay was ahead 4-3 going into the final 20 minutes.

Gord Marshall, Doug Baird, Don Lindsay and Paul Hughes score the other Trio markers while Tony St. Denis, Greg Hollett, Bruce Berkey and Mike Eastman replied for Flyers.

Wade Jones blocked 35 shots on the Oak Bay net and Jim Lebitschnig made 31 saves for Fuller Lake.

Athletics tripped Western Homes Buckaroos 8-6 at Juan de Fuca Arena and Leafs and Merchants battled to a 5-5 deadlock at Esquimalt Sports Centre in South Island Big Six League best-of-five semi series openers.

Bryan Preston set the pace for Athletics with two goals and singles were contributed by Kevin Kennedy, John Entzminger, Ron Trafford, Graham Brown, Ross Swanton and Dale Ewasiuk. Murray Kennett, Gord Sturtridge, Bill Pettinger, Norm Allen, Wayne Proceviat and Larry Hansen replied for Leafs.

Bob Crawford made 21 saves in the A's net while Ron Hird and Dave Waite combined for 25 stops at the other end of the ice.

Terry Parsons (2), Rugs Pritchard, Rob Coldwell and Warren Smith scored for Esquimalt and Al Goldade, Bob Grant, Cam Kring, Phil Guthrie and Ron Schmidt replied for Juan de Fuca.

Atlanta closing in on divisional title

By The Associated Press

Don't look now but Atlanta Hawks, who haven't won a title since the National Basketball Association went from two to four divisions in 1970-71, have the biggest lead of any NBA division pacesetter heading down the homestretch.

"Now we're six up and 17 to go and that's just great," coach Hubie Brown said Wednesday after the Hawks defeated Indiana Pacers 116-111 and opened a six-game Central Division bulge over San Antonio Spurs, who were beaten by Boston 130-125, and Houston Rockets, 110-97 winners over Washington. The Hawks' magic number to clinch is 12.

They turned back Indiana as Eddie Johnson scored 32 points, including a tie-breaking three-point basket with 21 seconds to play. Johnson connected with only one second left on the 24-second clock to give the Hawks a 114-111 lead. Indiana's Johnny Davis then missed a three-pointer and Johnson, fouled in the scramble for the rebound, added a pair of free throws.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia 76ers edged Seattle SuperSonics 101-98 in overtime, Milwaukee Bucks overtimed Phoenix Suns 119-110, San Diego Clippers whipped Detroit Pistons 129-113 and Golden State Warriors downed New Jersey Jets 133-120.

Larry Bird scored 30 points and Cedric Maxwell added 22 to lead the Celtics to their fourth consecutive victory. They remained 1½ games ahead of runner-up Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division.

Julius Erving scored 23 points, including the go-ahead basket in overtime, to deal Seattle its second straight loss.

Erving's 17-foot jump shot 39 seconds into the extra period put the 76ers on top 97-95, Bobby Jones' 18-footer increased the edge to 99-95 and Maurice Cheeks' two free throws with five seconds remaining clinched the Sixers' eighth victory in the last nine games.

Moses Malone scored 33 points, including 21 of 23 free throws, and got into a late-game shoving match with Washington's Elvin Hayes as Houston triumphed.

Vic Rapp looking to fight for title

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions head coach Vic Rapp said Tuesday the Canadian Football League club is past the point of wanting just to make the playoffs and is looking to fight for the championship.

The 61 club members who showed up for the annual general meeting were told that the club, which showed a net loss of $47,194 in 1979, hopes to break even next year. The club has more than 2,000 paid up members.

The season ticket campaign already is under way with the added incentive that season ticket holders will be offered preferred seating privileges in the prospective new stadium.

Season tickets last year numbered 11,300 and Empire Stadium can accommodate 16,120 people between the goal lines.

Listed as a major reason for the loss in 1979 was the injury list expense of $220,000.

Rapp said he and the assistant coach studied the reason for the apparent excess of injuries. He said they have come up with new programs for the players in the off-season and will undertake new conditioning programs.

New goalie proving to be ticket-seller

ATLANTA (AP) — The man whose goaltending beat the Russians and then the Finns to win an Olympic gold medal for the United States hockey team will be in goal for Atlanta Flames on Saturday night, the National Hockey League team announced on Wednesday.

Jim Craig, 22, has agreed to a long-term contract that will be signed Friday in Atlanta, Flames general manager Cliff Fletcher said, looking forward to a big crowd for the Saturday game against Colorado.

"Olympic hockey has done a lot for professional hockey," said Flames' spokesman John Marshall moments after the agreement was reached. "We happen to have the draft rights to the most recognizable and best-known member of that (U.S.) team.

"This is extremely critical for us to sell tickets. We haven't been drawing well. An average Saturday night attendance against Colorado would be about 9,500, and, we will probably sell all 15,155 seats as it is."

It would be the first sellout for the Flames in Atlanta this season, Marshall said. The extra ticket sales would mean an extra $50,000 or $60,000 for the financially strapped team.

The tactic appeared to be working as ticket orders swamped Flames offices Wednesday evening. The sales were "unreal," one spokesman said.

"It's not just money — it's enthusiasm for the sport as a whole. Obviously the enthusiasm won't be quite what it was during the Games, but we hope the Games will have a positive influence on attendance," said Marshall.

The contract covers this and the next three seasons, Fletcher said, but declined to disclose terms of the pact he worked out by telephone with Craig's agent, Bob Murray, in Boston.

Champion upset

Barbara Savage of Vancouver upset reigning Canadian champion Beryl Paton of Calgary, 3-1, Sunday to win the "A" title in B.C.'s first-ever "women's squash weekend" at the Harbor Square Squash Club.

Savage got past Sandy Drever of the host club 3-1 and in the other semi-final, Paton beat Jill Thomas of Vancouver also 3-1.

Victoria's top-ranked Canadian junior Andrie Levey was unable to play because of an ankle injury.

Debbie Jackson of the Racquet Club of Victoria defeated Jean Wescott of Harbor Square, 3-0, to take the "B" title, Barbara Hislop of Vancouver edged Toni Grubel of Vancouver 3-2 in an exciting "C" final and the "D" class was won by April McKenna of Harbor Square who blanked Lillian Pugh of the Racquet Club 3-0.

A total of 76 women took part with many more watching the matches and Harbor Square pro Stuart Dixon said the weekend was such a success it will become an annual affair.

When is a rookie not a rookie in NHL?

EDMONTON (CP) — The National Hockey League apparently will not recognize two records set by Wayne Gretzky, Edmonton Oilers' 19-year-old play-making wizard.

The records are for most assists in one game and for most points in one game by a player in his first NHL season.

Gretzky broke both records with seven assists in an 8-2 victory over Washington Capitals last Friday. Players earn a point for each assist.

"Gretzky is not eligible for either record," NHL statistician Ron Andrews said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"We'll probably have to change it to read rookie or first major-league season."

Jim McFadden of Detroit Red Wings set the record for most assists in one game in his first NHL season Nov. 23, 1947 when he collected five in a 9-3 victory over Chicago Black Hawks. Seven players share the record of five points in one game by a player in his first NHL campaign.

Gretzky tied Billy Taylor's 33-year-old record for most assists in one game by a player past his first season.

The league has ruled that Gretzky is not an NHL rookie because he played in the now-defunct World Hockey Association last year. At the same time Gretzky's points from last year are not allowed to count toward his major-league career totals because he played in a minor league (what the NHL calls the WHA) last year.

"Mr. Gretzky has caused us some problems," Andrews said. "It should be one way or the other. You can't very well say he's not a rookie on one hand and that he is a rookie on the other hand."

Argos sign Streater

TORONTO (CP) — Jimmy Streater, a 22-year-old quarterback from the University of Tennessee, has signed with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Switching shortstop gets rich Card pact

ST. LOUIS (AP) — All-star shortstop Garry Templeton has agreed to terms of a six-year contract with St. Louis Cardinals for more than $4 million.

The Cardinals announced the agreement but declined to reveal the amount of Templeton's pay in keeping with team policy. But a reliable source divulged the salary to be paid the flashy switch-hitting infielder, 23, who led the National League with 211 hits in 1979.

"I'm very happy," Templeton said. "I couldn't ask for anything more. I'm looking forward to being with the Cardinals for six more years and maybe longer."

Templeton's contract contains a built-in veto to a trade to six unidentified clubs. A multi-year contract signed last month by team-mate Keith Hernandez contained a similar clause.

Templeton, who has 654 hits in slightly more than three major league campaigns, joined Hernandez and switch-hitting catcher Ted Simmons as the highest-paid Cardinals.

Lions coach leaves for post with Chiefs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Defensive line coach Don Lawrence of the B.C. Lions announced today he is leaving the Canadian Football League club to become kicking coach for the Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

Lawrence was hired by the Lions in 1978 as coach for the defensive line and linebackers. With the addition of a fifth club coach last season, he was able to concentrate on the defensive line.

"We feel very sorry to have lost Don, primarily because of the outstanding job he has done for us," said Head Coach Vic Rapp. "He was an important and integral part of our coaching team and I would like to wish him the very best in the future."

Stenmark back on top; takes special slalom

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. (AP) — Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, avenging his first loss in more than two years in giant slalom the day before, easily won the World Cup special slalom Wednesday at Mount Tecumseh.

Stenmark skied two near-perfect runs and won by nearly one second. He had times of 51.71 and 50.33 for one minute and 42.04 seconds. Christian Neureuther of West Germany rocketed from sixth after one run to second over-all with 1:43.02 on runs of 52.30 and 50.72.

Klaus Heidegger of Austria was third in 51.91-51.17 for 1:43.08. Fourth went to Peter Popangelov of Bulgaria in 1:43.19 on runs of 52.75 and 50.44, just 11-hundredths off Stenmark's fastest run of the second heat.

The race was the 100th in World Cup for the 23-year-old Swede, and he made it his 47th career World Cup victory. Only the day before, however, Stenmark had a string of 14 consecutive giant slalom victories snapped by Austrian Hans Enn.

On Wednesday, Stenmark skied aggressively, knocking down gates during the entire length of both runs. There were 67 gates set on the first run, 70 on the second. Both runs were 573 metres long with a vertical drop of 174 metres.

Bojan Krizaj of Yugoslavia was fifth in 52.35 and 50.76 for 1:43.21, and Anton Steiner of Austria was sixth in 51.99-51.26 for 1:43.25. Seventh went to Joze Kuralt of Yugoslavia in 52.58-50.69 for 1:43.61, and Aleksandr Zhirov of the Soviet Union was eighth in 52.10-51.51 for 1:43.61.

Bohumir Zeman of Czechoslovakia was ninth in 52.61-51.05 for 1:43.66, and Phil Mahre of Yakima, Wash., was 10th in 52.92-50.77 for 1:43.69.

The victory gave Stenmark, a double Olympic gold medallist, 170 points toward the over-all World Cup title, which he has won three times. Andreas Wenzel, who fell in the second run, remained second with 142, and Krizaj moved into third with 123 points. Wenzel, from

Parking-rates boost irks Rider manager

OTTAWA (CP) — Jake Dunlap is hopping mad about a recent city council decision to bump parking rates for Canadian Football League season ticket holders by 60 per cent to $40.

"People were yelling when they had to pay $25 a season. . . what are they going to say now," fumed Dunlap, Ottawa Rough Riders' general manager. "This hike could kill us."

There are approximately 2,000 parking spots at Lansdowne park. Parking passes are offered to season ticket holders and then to the general public.

Dunlap said the increase could cut into season ticket sales. The Riders have lost about $300,000 during the last two years while paying about $500,000 in rent to the city.

Mayor Marion Dewar says she will bring the matter up at a board of control meeting later this week.

Volleyballers jump higher with electro-stimulation

By BRIAN PARDOE

WINNIPEG (CP) — It won't make anyone run faster than a speeding bullet or jump the tallest building in a single bound, but coach Jack Rutherford hopes a new muscle-building technique will help improve his University of Winnipeg women's volleyball team.

The technique, called electro-stimulation, uses electrical currents to build up muscle strength.

Rutherford notes that in emergency situations people often have the ability to get more strength out of their muscles, even to the point of lifting up the end of a car.

"We know there is that resource of extra strength and we're trying to tap it and use it."

Rutherford is concentrating on the girls' quadracepts muscle group, the four muscles at the front of the thigh, to help their vertical jump.

Two pads are secured to the front of the thigh, one at the top and one just above the knee, and a measured amount of current is run through the leg.

What results is a strong tingling sensation that builds until the muscles begin to move involuntarily.

"It's not really an uncomfortable feeling, it's a strange feeling that is difficult to describe," Rutherford says. "It just becomes a matter of getting familiar with it and once that happens there really is no problem."

Rutherford says the technique has long been used for rehabilitation purposes, but has been used on healthy athletes only recently. He learned about it last summer while taking a physical education course in Russia, and decided to try it on his volleyball team.

"There was a lot of anxiety among the girls at first," he recalls. "But all the girls are quite used to it now and they come and hook themselves up."

The players go through a program in which the current is applied for 10 seconds, followed by a rest interval of 50 seconds. They do 10 repetitions on each leg and it takes about 20 minutes to do a full workout.

The girls have done two five-week programs since last September, and Coach Rutherford says there have been improvements in their strength and vertical jump.

"At the very least there has been a psychological improvement," he says. "They think they are jumping higher, and some of them actually are jumping higher."

"My jump is a lot higher and my legs aren't tired during long matches."

The technique was developed by Russian neurophysiologist Dr. Yakov Kots. Rutherford says a number of athletes have credited it with improving their performances, including former Olympic gymnast Olga Korbut.

Sport bodies traditionally frown on any artificial means of improving an athlete's performance, and Rutherford believes the question of ethics will be raised.

"I think in the next few years you're going to see more and more people going on these kinds of programs," he says. "Ultimately the Olympic committee will have to make a decision on whether it's allowable."

The program is not all that visible at present, and Rutherford doesn't expect any problem as far as the 1980 Olympics are concerned.

One problem he sees that would make it hard to police the technique is that "there is virtually nothing that we know of that would indicate that an athlete had been doing this kind of program."

"Ultimately they would be relying on the honor of the athletes."

Before the judge

Judge Fred Green issued a warrant for the arrest of a witness in provincial court Wednesday, and then called him to the stand when a defence lawyer wouldn't.

Green instructed Steven Roderick White, 899 Craigflower, to testify in the case of 19-year-old Ricky Douglas Timms, 1340 Sussex, who was charged with having care and control of a vehicle while impaired, having care and control with a blood-alcohol reading over .08, and driving while under suspension.

Victoria police initially had difficulty determining the driver but were told another person had been driving at the time of the mishap. That person was taken to the police station for a breath test but Timms went to the station 15 minutes later and admitted he had been driving.

But Timms' testimony concerning the times of the accident, and when he turned up at the station, differed from the police.

Timms also testified he had three or four drinks at White's residence between the time of the accident and when he went to the station.

Defence counsel Robert Salmond said White, who was to be his witness, could not be served with a subpoena to appear for the trial.

When White appeared in court in the afternoon, Salmond said he had an opportunity to speak to him and now declined to call him as a witness.

The judge then exercised the rarely-used right to call the witness.

White testified he was in his apartment at 899 Craigflower on the night of the incident about 11 p.m. and could not recall any visitors except, perhaps, his landlord and a few friends. White said Timms had not visited that evening.

In finding Timms guilty on the over .08 charge and sentencing him to 14 days in jail, Green said he did not accept the evidence of the accused on the times of the events. He said his decision was buttressed by White's testimony.

Crown counsel N.K. Varma said Timms was convicted of dangerous driving Nov. 28, 1977, in Victoria and received a 60-day jail term, to be served concurrently with a sentence of seven months definite and five months indeterminate handed out at the same time for theft over $200.

"I'm hoping this process today has taught a few people in this courtroom a lesson," Green said. "It has been a fascinating case."

She pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Aug. 25.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said the incident occurred in a Colwood parking lot about 2:35 a.m. when RCMP observed her driving in an unusual manner. Breath test readings of .14 and .15 were obtained.

McDougall had a previous conviction for impaired driving on July 20, 1977, when she was fined $50.

Accused absent, convicted anyway

A 24-year-old man was convicted in absentia Wednesday in provincial court.

A spokesman for the Crown counsel's office said more use of the Criminal Code provision is being considered.

Bernie Cameron Thors, formerly of 955 Dingley Dell, was found guilty of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand made by Oak Bay police Sept. 27.

Under Section 738, sub-section 3 of the code, the Crown may be granted permission to proceed "ex parte" — without the accused being present — but only on summary, not indictable offences, in which the consequences on conviction are more serious. The judge must be satisfied a summons or an appearance notice was served on the accused, and that the person has appeared in court at least once on the charge.

In this case, Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said, Thors appeared in court Oct. 11 when the trial was set for Wednesday. But when the case was called, Thors was not there, prompting Lang to apply under the appropriate section.

It was the first case in at least five years, as far as Lang could recall, that such a trial was held in Victoria. He said the procedure is used more in other parts of the province but rarely here.

He said his office is giving serious thought to going ahead in cases where the accused fails to show for trial.

Another accused fails to show in county court

For the second day in a row Wednesday, an accused person failed to appear to answer a charge in county court.

Brenda Lee Semeniuk, 20, also known as Brenda Lee Karaim, was charged with uttering — attempting on Jan. 5, 1979, to cause McGill and Orme pharmacy at 1201 Douglas to act on a forged prescription as if it was genuine.

Court was told she was free on her own undertaking to appear and was believed to be in Edmonton. Judge Montague Drake issued a bench warrant for her arrest.

In another courtroom, the case of Wilfred Harold Mellors, 35, of Nanaimo, was called for the second day in a row and again he did not appear. Court was told that police, acting on a bench warrant for his arrest issued Tuesday by Judge E.J.C. Stewart, had been unable to find him.

Mellors, free on $500 recognizance, is accused of wilfully damaging by fire on Oct. 16, 1978, two vehicles at 350 Robertson.

Export potential huge

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

CALGARY (CP) — Despite some disappointments, Western Canada's potential for increased exports is measured in billions of dollars, businessmen and analysts said Wednesday.

"Western Canada has greater opportunities than ever before," vice-chairman Jake Warren of the Bank of Montreal declared. "Let's go!"

Warren, formerly chief Canadian tariff negotiator, told an economic conference that widespread tariff cuts have opened new possibilities for exports of products from British Columbia paper to Winnipeg-made blue jeans.

Although rejecting "mad pursuit of manufacturing for manufacturing's sake," Warren said export markets offer chances to increase specific processing and secondary industries based on the West's abundant agricultural, mineral and energy resources.

Roy Lloyd, president of the Saskatchewan Mineral Development Corp., said government-owned Potash Corp. of Saskatchewan by itself had $330 million in exports last year and would have more than $1 billion in 1990.

And Saskatchewan's $15 million uranium production in 1975 is dwarfed by planned $900-million production capacity in 1985, he said.

B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner stressed the potential for selling expertise and machinery developed in Western Canadian resource industries.

Bonner said "a technical exchange possibly with commercial implications" could result from B.C. Hydro's sending two missions to China in the past six months to give advice on electrical transmission expansion.

But Bonner expressed concern about how inflation and low productivity may be hurting Canadian competitiveness.

Donald Lanskail, president of the B.C. Council of Forest Industries, said foreign protectionism remains a threat but the outlook for forest product exports is healthy.

Only British Columbia and the Soviet Union, he said, have significant softwood surpluses available for export.

Saanich juggles staff

Saanich council has approved three municipal staff appointments.

Retiring deputy municipal clerk Jo-Anne Morrison will be succeeded by Terry Kirk, senior executive officer of Lake Cowichan School District.

Mrs. Morrision is a member of Saanich's Heritage Advisory Committee and will become municipal archivist for two years after her retirement next month.

Thomas Anderson, an Oak Bay municipal employee, will join the personnel department next month as safety program development officer.

Music lovers leap year special

Lyricist W.S. Gilbert contended it was probably an ill-natured fairy who decreed that every four years February would have 29 days.

Whoever it was, the extra day can still be tuned to the pleasures of music, which is how Victoria Conservatory of Music faculty's La Confrerie St. Julien is using it.

On Friday at Craigdarroch Castle at 8 p.m., La Confrerie will offer a program of quite rare 17th century works of Viennese composers who were active in the court chapel. Vienna was the seat of the Holy Roman Emperor and a musical centre of great importance long before Haydn and Beethoven.

Among composers and performers active at the court were Heinrich Biber, Anton Schmelzer and Gottlieb Muffat, who were originators of the German violin school and whose work will be represented on Friday's program.

The featured soloists in the concert will be violinist Sydney Humphreys and soprano Selena James.

Camsell job in month

Tenders will be awarded in about a month for the repair and refit of the Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell.

Herb Buchanan, regional director, said Tuesday the contract will cover repairing the damage caused to the engine room when the Camsell struck ice in Queen Maude Gulf, east of Cambridge Bay, on Sept. 10, 1978. It will also cover installation of more modern control machinery, and improving accommodation.

Alderman to continue fight for ward system

Esquimalt alderman Larry Mann said he's not ready to give up on his proposal for a ward system for the four core municipalities just because reaction hasn't been enthusiastic.

"At least 100 people, members of the general public, have spoken to me about this since it became known and not one of them was opposed to the idea," Mann said.

"Everyone said it's about time we look at it."

Mann said he'd like to a have a public panel discussion so both sides could be aired.

He suggested the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce might be a suitable body to sponsor such a debate.

He said even his own council — which came out heavily against his proposal — admitted that amalgamation of fire and police services is a logical consideration.

Bootleg record raps pending

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP says charges have yet to be laid after the weekend discovery of a multi-million-dollar bootleg record industry masterminded in Canada.

The RCMP and U.S. police seized documents, master records, manufacturing equipment, tapes and about 4,000 albums after raids in Toronto, Kitchener, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Nashville, Tenn., and Cincinnati.

The records, seized after a four-month investigation, included a Rolling Stones benefit concert last year in Oshawa, Ont., and performances by the late Jimi Hendrix, The Who, Blondie, Yes, and other well-known entertainers.

The benefit concert was ordered by a Canadian judge as part of guitarist Keith Richards' sentence on a charge of heroin possession.

"When we began (this investigation), people from the Canadian record industry helped to train us so we would know what to look for," said Constable John Langley, one of two RCMP officers who planned the operation.

A bootleg record is a secret recording of a public performance. Generally, a bootleg album is recorded by a member of the audience or is taped directly from the sound equipment, possibly by a member of the technical staff accompanying the group. Langley said that in some cases, commercially recorded material is included on the bootleg album.

Constable Don Crane, Langley's partner, led a raid on an estate near Shakespeare, Ont., near Stratford, where police found two 1.5-metre alligators splashing in a bathtub and charged the estate's owner with possession of narcotics.

Western caucus urged to stave off separatism

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Wednesday gave president Cedric Steele the go-ahead to ask incoming prime minister Pierre Trudeau for the creation of a caucus of opposition MPs from the west.

It was only one of a deluge of ideas on how to counteract Western Canada's almost total lack of representation in the new government.

Steele will suggest the chamber meet Senator Ray Perreault or some other senators to discuss Vancouver Island concerns and ask Trudeau to consider the caucus for the four Western provinces.

Steele said such a caucus could discourage increasingly frequent separatist talk.

In the past, he said, businessmen would have called any one talking of Western separatism "crazy people with a loony idea."

But he said chamber past-president Mel Cooper, the owner of radio station CFAX, has told him some business leaders in Vancouver are seriously beginning to consider separatism

Cooper said later he doesn't favor separatism but merely reporting what he'd heard discussed in Vancouver.

"We've all heard talk of Western separatism," Cooper said, "but in the past, business leaders, who have usually shown some concern for the country, pooh-poohed it."

However, he said some business leaders are now suggesting it may be time for Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. to consider separation.

Cooper, who declined to reveal any names, said: "One major business leader, top-level, said if someone wanted to ask for funds for such a group (separatists), there would be an immediate response."

Cooper said he had heard mention of separatism at several meetings.

The separatism talk was also touched on by Health Minister Rafe Mair.

In rejecting the idea that the federal government should appoint senators to cabinet, Mair said in Kamloops he wants an overhaul of the constitution.

Mair, MLA for Kamloops and head of the B.C. delegation to last year's federal-provincial talks on constitutional reform, said the fact no Liberals were elected west of Manitoba is potentially the biggest calamity that has befallen Canada.

Mair said he opposes proposals that Trudeau appoint western senators to his cabinet.

"The thought of Senator Jack Austin (a former principal secretary to Trudeau from Vancouver) going and representing B.C., a man who is not elected with no legitimate base, just horrifies me," Mair said.

The minister said suggestions contained in the constitutional report prepared by former Liberal cabinet minister Jean-Luc Pepin and former Ontario premier John Robarts, calling for creation of an upper house of Parliament with regional representation, should be implemented.

Vancouver-Kingsway NDP MP Ian Waddell called on Trudeau in a letter to establish a Commons committee on Western development.

Ex-mayors a little short-sighted

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce wants to know what the city will look like by the year 2000.

Chamber representatives Wednesday first wanted to peek 50 years into the future but when president Cedric Steele asked former mayors of the four core municipalities if they'd like to discuss what the city would be like a half-century from now, they suggested they wouldn't be around that long.

So March 6, chamber directors and the ex-mayors will meet with a University of Victoria urban geographer to discuss the growth and development of Greater Victoria over the next two decades.

Steele said a handbook could result from the discussions.

U.K. steel strike buckles

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of steelworkers employed by privately owned companies went back to work Wednesday in a growing revolt against an eight-week national steel strike by employees of state-owned British Steel.

Wednesday's return to work involved men at the Bidston steel mill on Merseyside and Firth Brown, the biggest independent steel firm in the northern industrial city of Sheffield.

On Monday, more than 3,000 employes of two major independent steelmakers trooped back to work, following the lead of 800 men at the Canadian-owned Sheerness Steel Co. who defied mass pickets to stay at work.

Employes of privately owned steel plants earn about 20 percent more than their colleagues in the state-run sector. The 110,000 BSC men want a 20-per-cent increase in their average weekly base rate of £92 (about $239). BSC has offered 12 per cent.

Soviets seeking way to pull out of Afghanistan?

Times News Services

Signals from the Kremlin suggest that the Soviet leaders are looking for a face-saving way to extricate their forces from the increasingly costly venture in Afghanistan, according the reports from the Associated Press in Moscow.

In a major speech by President Leonid Brezhnev last week and hints through the Soviet press, a London newspaper and a U.S. industrialist, the Russians seem to suggest that they are prepared to start pulling their soldiers out of Afghanistan if the United States reciprocates by stopping all aid to the Moslem rebels fighting the Communist Afghan regime.

"I want to state very definitively," Brezhnev said last Friday, "we will be ready to commence the withdrawal of our troops as soon as all forms of outside interference directed against the government and people of Afghanistan are fully terminated."

"Let the United States together with the neighbors of Afghanistan guarantee this, and then the need of Soviet military assistance will cease to exist."

Writing in the Literary Gazette, commentator Leonid Zamyatin called on President Carter "to issue a command for ending thrusts into Afghanistan's territory, for stopping arms shipments, for liquidating bases of mercenaries, in short, for discontinuing all forms of interference directed against the government and people of Afghanistan."

"Then there would be no more of the reasons which caused the Afghan leadership to ask us for help," Zamyatin said.

U.S. industrialist Armand Hammer, after a meeting with Brezhnev Wednesday, said the president told him he understood that Carter cannot control all the elements in Afghanistan. But he said Carter could "use his influence" against foreign intervention, meaning the support Pakistan, China and others are giving the Afghan rebels.

Spain quits cod zone

OTTAWA (CP) — Spain has agreed to withdraw six trawlers which were fishing cod in a closed area outside Canada's 200-mile zone, a fisheries department official said today.

The official said the trawlers were to have left the area Tuesday, but bad weather has prevented aircraft from checking.

As a result, Canada and Spain will resume negotiations next week on a bilateral fishing agreement. The talks were broken off two weeks ago by Canada because Spain refused to remove the trawlers.

Nations give N-power green light

The Los Angeles Times

VIENNA, Austria — A 59-nation technical conference concluded Wednesday that world nuclear energy development must be continued despite the danger of the spread of nuclear weapons.

It set forth this priority in a communique that ended a two-year evaluation of nuclear fuel problems which resulted in an exhaustive and massive series of technical studies.

The countries involved in the International Nuclear Fuel Cycle Evaluation Conference agreed that "effective measures can and should be taken to minimize the danger" of the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

But they also agreed that non-proliferation measures had to be applied "without jeopardizing energy supplies or the development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes."

The technical studies themselves also endorsed both the development of fast-breeder nuclear reactors which run on plutonium and the economic and technical necessity for reprocessing used nuclear-fuel rods. Both moves will increase the amount of weapons-grade plutonium in the world. But the technical studies found both steps to be justified and necessary from the standpoint of improving the world's energy supply.

By coincidence, as the meeting ended, the nationalized Electricity Authority of France announced in Paris that it would place orders for two massive fast-breeder reactors, each capable of producing power in the 1,500-megawatt range each before 1985. France is already far ahead in fast-breeder reactor development, with completion of a 1,300-megawatt plant due to come on stream to produce power in 1983.

The conclusions of the massive INFCE study now pose some philosophical and policy questions for the Carter administration, which started things in 1977 in an effort to alert the world to the dangers of weapons proliferation inherent in the growth of nuclear power.

When President Carter took office he stopped work on construction of a big U.S. reprocessing center and tried to halt fast-breeder development in the United States. He also drastically tightened licensing procedures and controls over U.S. exports of enriched uranium.

Baldwin packs away 'crusader' image

Baldwin takes parting shot for the system

OTTAWA (CP) — Many Canadians voted last week holding their noses in disgust at the state of democracy in Canada, says a retiring veteran of the House of Commons.

Gerald Baldwin, MP for Peace River, Alta., for 22 years and a crusader for open government for most of that time, said Canadians feel contempt, disgust, cynicism and distrust for the processes of government and for Parliament.

He said in an interview this week that they might inflict a system on the new Liberal government of Pierre Trudeau and on Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark under which MPs will once again get a piece of the legislative action.

This would overcome what he called the stupid idea of Trudeau putting senators in his cabinet in order to hoax westerners into believing he was in bed with them.

Democracy is becoming little more than voting for a single leader — a messiah who says he will cure all ills — who is packaged and sold to the public like soap or corn flakes, Baldwin said.

If something was not done about the situation, in time a leader would be elected who would say "screw Parliament" and give Canada what amounted to one-man, one-party government.

Baldwin voiced the gloomy thoughts as he prepared to vacate the parliamentary office he occupied for the last 10 years.

The 73-year-old Alberta lawyer retired from politics before the last election and now will divide his time between a new house in Freeport, Bahamas, Ottawa and Peace River.

He leaves with his most cherished dream unfulfilled. The defeat of the Conservative government last December meant that freedom-of-information legislation he had worked on for years went unpassed. The Official Secrets Act, which he condemned in the strongest terms, still, in his word, flourishes.

The disgust, to a degree, included the news media.

He warned that any person in public life ignores the situation at his peril because "it's there, it's real, it exists."

Mideast report due soon

OTTAWA (UPC) — Former Tory leader Robert Stanfield's final report on Canadian-Middle East relations is being studied by Prime Minister Joe Clark and will likely be made public shortly.

A Clark aide said this week the report deals with current and future economic and cultural relation between Canada and most of the Middle East countries.

Following his first of two visits to the Middle East and after Canada was threatened with an economic boycott by Arab countries, Stanfield recommended that Clark should back away from the plan.

Recounts may boost Grit edge

OTTAWA (UPC) — Judicial recounts are under way in two tightly held Conservative seats and begin today in another hotly contested riding, threatening further losses to defeated Prime Minister Joe Clark.

In addition, another two Tory seats could go to the Liberals if judicial recounts are ordered in those ridings.

A spokesman for the chief electoral officer said Wednesday judges in the Ontario ridings of Waterloo and Haldimand-Norfolk were recounting the ballots, while a third southern Ontario recount was to begin today in Simcoe-North.

Roch LaSalle, Clark's chief Quebec lieutenant and outgoing supply and services minister, faced the possibility of losing his seat following an order for a judicial recount scheduled to begin Friday.

LaSalle, one of only two Tory MPs elected in Quebec last May and the lone Conservative to claim victory there last week, won his riding by 309 votes over Liberal Gilles Ratelle.

If a recount is ordered in Yukon, Public Works Minister Eric Nielsen may lose his seat to Liberal Ione Christensen, the territory's former commissioner who was fired by the Tories last fall.

The Yukon riding, held by Nielsen for 23 years, was retained by the outgoing minister by 61 votes.

The only threat to Liberal strength lies in the constituency of Thunder Bay-Atikokan, where Liberal incumbent MP Paul McRae won by only 112 votes over his NDP opponent. An official recount later reduced his margin to 84 votes.

The closest race remains in Simcoe-North, where another rookie MP, Doug Lewis, defeated Liberal Allan Martin by only 60 votes. However, an official recount by the riding's returning officer later increased the plurality to 77.

Most of his colleagues don't do it, nor do they approve of it, but Dr. Hugh Schade, of Los Gatos, Calif., gives his 5,000 patients the only complete copy of their medical records. As a result, he says, many of them better understand their illnesses and treatments. "Why shouldn't a patient keep his medical record?" Schade says. "He has the biggest investment in his own health."

Mother's milk advocates have won a victory in the Iowa City firehouse case. An Iowa civil rights commission has ruled that firefighter Linda Eaton was a victim of sex discrimination when superiors denied her request to breast-feed her son at the fire hall. She was twice suspended and sent home before her lawyers obtained a temporary injunction against the city. The hearing officer ruled that Eaton, 27, was discriminated against, that she was entitled to back pay and the city must pay legal costs.

Stutz

A former suburban Detroit couple has sued the Christian Science Church and two of its healing practitioners in the 1977 death of their 16-month-old son. The suit was filed by Douglas and Rita Swan of Jamestown, N.D., whose son, Matthew, became ill on June 17, 1977. He was treated by church practitioners for almost two weeks. The youngster died of bacterial meningitis in a Detroit hospital July 7, 1977.

Jodie Stutz says she had no idea that when she put her bare bottom on the Xerox machine, she was putting her job on the line. "I can't belive I got fired over this," she says. Stutz, a 21-year-old secretary, said that one night after work last month at Deere and Co. in Moline, Ill., she decided to christen the new copying machine on the floor by making a picture of her bottom. "A lot of people were taking pictures of their hands and their faces and fooling around," she said. "So I decided I would take a picture of my bottom, thinking it would be kind of fun just to see what it would look like." While another secretary stood watch at the door, Stutz pulled down her pants, hopped up on the machine and pushed the print button. Word got around after Stutz showed friends in the office her copy. She said that her boss asked her about rumors that she had thrown a big party in the Xerox room, that three men had helped her get undressed and then guarded the door, that she had sent copies of her rear as an invitation to a birthday party.

Dear Abby:

A woman I work with comes to work drunk periodically. She's nice when she's sober, but when she's drunk she's rude to clients, uses foul language and is very obnoxious to the rest of us. We have covered up for her so far, but it's really getting too much to handle.

I realize that alcoholism is an illness and that this woman needs help, but I'm afraid if I suggest it she will tell me to mind my own business.

Vote For Sobriety

Dear Vote:

Risk being told to mind your own business, and tell her anyway. Anyone who needs a drink to face the day is in serious trouble. You and your coworkers do her no favor by covering up for her. The poor woman needs to come to grips with her problem now. Alcoholism never gets better, nor does it go away without treatment. It just gets worse. Let her know that you care by urging her to seek help.

Dear Abby:

I am a 62-year-old woman who recently decided on an early retirement, although I'm in good health.

I have a friend my age who is still working. She began calling me several times a week to come and have dinner with her. Just as I am about to leave after dinner she loads me down with half a dozen boxes, several books, etc. She says, "You have more time than I have now, so I hope you won't mind taking these shoes to the shoe repair, dropping these books at the library, and returning this blouse for credit."

At first I accommodated her with a smile, then I realized that every time she asked me over she had a list of errands for me to run. Abby, she has a car, and even though I no longer have an 8-to-5 job, I have plenty to keep me busy and don't appreciate running other people's errands.

The last time this happened, I said, "I would like to be invited over here just once and not be asked to run any errands!"

Well, I haven't heard from her since. I miss her. Should I call and apologize?

Minnie

Dear Minnie:

Not unless you miss being her errand girl.

Dear Abby:

You wrote that if a person is invited to a wedding reception, a gift is in order.

Well, I disagree. I received an invitation to the wedding and reception for a girl whose name didn't mean a thing to me.

I did not send a gift. Do you think I was wrong?

Chutzpah

Dear Chutzpah:

No. I was. I didn't consider those who would send invitations to strangers.

ESS + CAF12 = Nutrition

By LON WOOD

Next week is Nutrition Week in B.C. but lunch at one Victoria area high school will have only one difference:

"We're going to force the kids to eat brown bread," says Elizabeth Mayne, head of the Esquimalt Senior Secondary School's home economics department.

Esquimalt high's approach to Nutrition Week would seem rather feeble — except that every week at ESS is nutrition week with students and staff offered nutritious meals Monday through Thursday.

"Four days a week the menu generally consists of an entree or hot food, three or four different types of sandwiches, two salads and one or two desserts," Mayne told the Times Tuesday.

The meals are the special task of a dozen ESS students taking a vocational course called Cafeteria 12 (CAF 12).

The 12 students put in some 45 to 50 extra hours in each week as the course is actually on-the-job training for them, said Mayne, who directs the course.

"It is a big job, and the work hard. They have also gone out to work in one of Victoria's largest hotel restaurants, doing a different job each day," she said.

CAF 12 has been offered at ESS since 1974 and is unique to the school district.

"Our facilities are not the best and we are severely restricted for space in our serving area," said Mayne. "Storage space in the Home Ec. room was not designed for food production in large quantities — none of the schools in this district were designed for this sort of project. But considering the limited conditions it is amazing how good our results are."

Both Mayne and the students arrive before 7:30 each morning to get breakfast for students and staff by 7:45.

"We will probably drop the breakfast because the students are just too overworked as it is," she said. "It has, however, been popular with teachers, students, the janitors and grounds people."

The menu for this coming Monday is Quiche Lorraine, 65¢; whole wheat buns with tuna, 50¢; both peanut butter and turkey sandwiches, 45¢ and 60¢ respectively; coleslaw 25¢; relishes 25¢ and pumpkin chiffon pie, 35¢.

Remaining lunches next week will include Spaghetti Bolognaise, 60¢; Waldorf Salad, 25¢; carrot cake, 25¢; fruit salad and ice cream, 35¢ and bacon and tomato sandwiches, 50¢.

Key to meal planning, said Mayne, is nutrition, variety — and a mind to youthful preferences.

"If we just considered teenage tastes, we'd make much more money but we'd be stuck with nothing but hamburgers and submarine sandwiches," she said.

There's no sign hung in the cafeteria over the whole wheat buns saying "Over three billion sold" but at least some 100 students are served each day with $80 to $90 rung into the cash register.

"The program does not make a profit — this is not the function — but it is self-supporting and covers the cost of food and extra help," said Mayne.

Teacher's aide Edna Weetman oversees much of the lunchtime operation and distributes uneaten salads and other perishables to afternoon students who may have missed the noon meal.

"We have no waste — and when large quantities of baked goods and other foods are prepared in other Home Ec. classes, we take the best of it and sell it in the cafeteria to effect a saving in the overall Home Ec. budget."

During Nutrition Week the entire Esquimalt Senior student body and staff will participate in a nutrition survey to compare their daily diets with daily requirements given in the Canada Food Guide; take part in a contest guessing calorie content of 32 different foods and illustrate the Nutrition Week slogan Eat Right, Feel Great — Busy People Can.

Winner of the poster contest will receive . . . two nutritious lunches prepared by CAF 12 students.

TWENTY YEARS ago there was a standing high school joke that a person was so dumb the only thing they could pass was Cafeteria. Things have changed. Now, in the face of growing nutrition awareness, smart young people at Esquimalt Senior Secondary are actually taking a course called Cafeteria 12. CAF 12 program workers on the sandwich assembly line here are, from left, Cindy Thormoe, Brenda Fortier, Tim McMillan, Shelley Jones, Carolyn Gregg, Neil Sexsmith and teacher Elizabeth Mayne.

Eat right and feel great

Nutrition Week March 3 - 9

The theme for this year's Nutrition Week, March 3 to 9, is Eat Right, Feel Great — Busy People Can. It is designed to remind people that even though today's pace is hectic, proper nutrition is a top priority.

The campaign, sponsored by the B.C. Nutrition Council, will focus consumers' attention on:

—The necessity of good nutrition and its contribution to the quality of life.

—The key role nutrition plays in reducing the incidence of illness.

—Practical suggestions for establishing nutritious eating habits.

—How and where to obtain reliable sources of nutrition information within the community.

Nutrition information will be carried on radio, television and in the Times.

Most communities are featuring special activities during the week presented by health units libraries, hospitals, schools and YM/YWCAs. Watch for fitness testing displays, featured speakers, food demonstrations and recipe and meal planning ideas. Many retail stores will display Nutrition Week posters and logos to remind consumers to be conscious of nutrition when they are shopping for food. Copies of Canada Food Guide and other nutrition tips will be available.

Following are some suggestions to give busy people some nutritious breakfast ideas.

Although the B.C. Nutrition Council's 1980 Nutrition Week theme is directed at all of us, it should be heeded especially by the busy people who say they can't be bothered with breakfast.

Did you ever think about what the word "breakfast" means? It means you've been fasting for anywhere up to 12 hours and you need to refuel your body for the days' activities. All of us know that people who eat breakfast maintain a higher level of alertness in the morning than those who miss breakfast. Still, breakfast skippers can provide a long list of reasons why they can't eat breakfast. So let's deal with some of their excuses.

The "no time for breakfast" excuse:

There is time for breakfast if it consists of a combination of quick to fix foods like . . .

1. Fresh, canned for frozen fruit and vegetable juices.

2. Milk, yogurt, cottage cheese, custard, cheese.

3. Canned, frozen, dried or fresh fruits.

4. Enriched bread, muffins, rolls, fruit loaves.

5. Ready-to-eat cold cereals.

6. Quick-cooking hot cereals.

7. Hard-cooked eggs

8. Blender drinks.

The "I'm not hungry yet" excuse:

There is no rule that says breakfast must be eaten as soon as you get up.

1. Have a piece of fruit or glass of juice first, followed by a muffin, toast or crackers later. Then add an egg, milk, cheese or meat after that.

2. Eat and run by taking your breakfast with you to nibble on the way. Try fresh fruit, cheese and crackers, cheese, egg or meat sandwiches, canned juice, pudding or yogurt.

3. Pack a bag breakfast to eat at recess or coffee break. Include foods from the Four Food Groups.

The "breakfast is boring" excuse:

Perk up the traditional juice and cold cereal or egg and toast breakfast by using your imagination:

1. Add fresh fruit, yogurt or ice cream to cold cereal.

2. Add fresh fruit, wheat germ, chopped nuts, or granola to hot cooked cereal.

3. Serve a fresh fruit salad with cottage cheese or yogurt.

4. Serve sliced or cubed fruit in fruit juice.

5. Melt cheese on toast, rolls or muffins.

6. Serve toasted sandwiches with fish, meat or egg filling.

7. Add leftover meats and vegetables to scrambled eggs; serve on buns or muffins.

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

My mother has been given a soft diet because of some intestinal disturbance. Is there sufficient nourishment in this, just in case she is told to stay on it indefinitely?

Miss J.R.R.

Dear Miss R.:

Sometimes, people who have no teeth and who cannot chew normal food, or those with stomach and intestinal disturbances, are put on a regime of "soft" foods. These are readily digested, have a low residue, and are highly nourishing.

Cooked fruits, rice, bananas, potatoes, cheese, custards, puddings, eggs and cooked cereals all contain excellent nutrients. Well-ground beef, fish and fowl contain important ingredients, too, for a nutritious diet.

A good vitamin supplement, with additional minerals, can be added to the diet to sustain good health for long periods of time.

Dear Doctor:

I know it isn't nice to talk about it, but I have terrible itching around the rectal area. I have tried taking medicines, using ointments, and I've even gone on a starvation diet for a few days. Nothing seems to help this intolerable discomfort. I'm 62, and pretty healthy otherwise.

Mr. N.M.

Dear Mr. M.:

It is surprising how often this complaint is mentioned in readers' letters. Sufferers from this unpleasant itch acknowledge that although it is not a life-threatening condition, the misery can be devastating in intensity.

In a recent edition of Family Practice News, an excellent magazine published for doctors in general practice, a very interesting comment was made about your problem. Dr. William Friend, of the University of Washington School of Medicine, believes that coffee is responsible for 80 per cent of the cases of long-standing, intense itching in the anal area.

He believes, too, that tomatoes, chocolate and beer are also offenders. In the patients that Dr. Friend has treated he noted that the problem arose more frequently among those who drank more than two or three cups of coffee a day.

All patients with this problem are, of course, carefully examined, in order to be sure that they do not have hemorrhoids, pinworm infections, fungus infections or parasitic infections.

Friend says a patient must totally abstain from coffee for two weeks. This should be a sufficient time to note if the symptoms disappear.

Aging is all in head

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Age is only a mental attitude, says a 64-year-old student at New Mexico State University who has been attending college off and on over a 40-year period.

Paul Small first enrolled at City College of New York in the 1940s, but his formal education was interrupted by the Second World War.

Following his discharge from the military in 1945, he attended two colleges in New Jersey and then entered the civil service.

He and his wife, Joan, moved to Las Cruces several years ago.

Small continued to take college level courses during his career years. In 1970, he retired from civil service and enrolled in para-professional course, Training for Senior Citizens to Work with the Handicapped. He later started a formal degree program because of "an inner urge."

"I wanted to help people. I wanted to get clinical psychology in order to work with emotionally disturbed people, people with problems."

Clinical psychology, however, is not available as a major at New Mexico University, so Small selected the general psychology curriculum.

He completed a bachelor's degree in 1976, but didn't stop with that.

During the 1979 fall semester, he completed coursework in Spanish and community mental health and his classes this year include courses in personnel management and marketing.

Small is not an unusual sight at New Mexico University, where officials say he is among an increasing number of mature students.

Fifteen per cent of the fall semester student body were 30 or older, and orientation sessions designed specifically for the needs of such students are held each semester.

LILLY SCHREYER appeared on CBC Radio's cross-country Morningside show out of Ottawa Wednesday morning to comment on her lifestyle as wife of Canada's governor general.

Supersister arrives without gum

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Kids can and collect them just like baseball cards. But instead of swapping a Reggie Jackson for a Carl Yastrzemski, it's a Margaret Mead trade for a Rosa Parks.

They're a new breed of trading cards called Supersisters, featuring pictures and stories of famous contemporary women. And they're catching on, their creators say.

In Irvington, N.Y., they showed up last spring in the classroom, along with lessons about the women, and now they're shuffled in with the baseball cards and used in games.

The cards are the brainchild of a Ridgefield woman, Barbara Egerman, and her sister, Lois Rich, who lives in Irvington. They got the idea for the cards two years ago after Mrs. Rich's daughter Melissa asked why there were no girls on the baseball cards she collected.

After a lot of research and questions to 500 women in all fields, they came up with 72 different cards, each with a photograph on the front and a brief biographical sketch and quote on the back.

About 600 sets were produced with financial help from the New York state education department and distributed in Irvington schools for students from kindergarteners through grade 8.

"We suggested the teachers ask the children to name five famous women," said Mrs. Egerman, a former teacher and mother of two boys. "When the children can't do it, it's an eye-opener."

"The kids really seemed to enjoy them," she said in a telephone interview. "They piled them in with their baseball cards."

A second batch — 10,000 sets — is being printed, and there are plans for a mailing to school systems in several northeast states.

"We haven't eliminated the idea of trying to mass-market them in candy stores," Mrs. Egerman said.

But Supersisters wouldn't come with bubble gum like baseball cards: The living women pictured on them were assured that no product like that would be used. Besides, it would be difficult to find a product that is nutritionally good for children, Mrs. Egerman said.

Among those on the cards are Miss Mead, the late anthropologist; Mrs. Parks, the civil-rights activist who refused to give up her bus seat to a white man; Margaret Chase Smith, the former U.S. senator; Bonni Tiburzi, first women pilot for a major airline; and flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who became the first woman to play in a major orchestra when she joined the Boston Symphony.

Many moves domestic

By DAVID ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Divorce and childbirth may be more important factors than crime or bad schools in determining why people move in and out of cities, according to a new analysis.

"Over one-third of all moves in metropolitan areas are in connection with a change in marital status or new household formulations, or are motivated by the need for more space," says John Goodman, a senior research associate at the non-profit Urban Institute.

"... Contrary to popular opinion, neighborhood characteristics, school quality and commuting-relating reasons precipitate only a small fraction of moves, even those out of the city," he writes in APA Journal, the magazine of the American Planning Association.

Goodman said, however, the fact that crime or bad schools do not cause many moves does not mean they are unimportant in determining where people move to.

He cited schools for example.

"Even among movers with children, only a small minority cite schools as their main reason for moving," he said. "Yet schools may be very important considerations in the community and neighborhood destination choice of the movers."

Goodman said his study could find no one simple motivation behind family's decisions to move out of or into the city — but a "whole range of reasons."

"Yet, to some extent," he added, "neighborhood considerations and the desire to purchase a home seem to distinguish movers who select the city, and job accessibility distinguishes the motivation of those movers who cross the city boundary (in either direction) from those who do not."

Noting that the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act and other laws call for public policies to deconcentrate the urban poor and upgrade inner-city neighborhoods, Goodman said programs aimed at altering the destination choice of people who move would prove "more fruitful" than attempts to alter the rate at which they move.

"For example," he said, "programs to increase home ownership opportunities in the city will reduce movement out to the suburbs by city movers who desire to become homeowners."

"The most important determinant of where movers will move to," he added, "is where they move from."

PEKING — Max Factor & Co. has set up shop in China, selling everything in its cosmetic line from "Brazen Raisin" and "Cuddle-Up Coral" lip glosses to $85 flagons of Halston perfume.

Wedged between the silk kites and the plastic sandals at Peking's Friendship Store is the new display counter for Max Factor, the first, and so far the only, foreign cosmetics firm to penetrate the Chinese market.

"Eighty-three percent moisturizers, 100 per cent terrific lips," boasts the large display for the company's "Maxi-Moist" lipsticks.

In its first weeks here, Max Factor's presence has been confined to counters at the Peking Hotel and the Friendship Store, a department store that caters to foreign diplomats and tourists. Both are off-limits to all but a few privileged Chinese, so the shoppers standing in line for free makeup demonstrations come almost exclusively from Peking's foreign community.

But the Hollywood-based cosmetics firm, a unit of Norton Simon Inc., clearly has its eye on the potentially massive Chinese market, especially the 500 million female consumers.

"Chinese girls would wear makeup if they could," declared Patsy Yip, a public relations representative from Max Factor's Hong Kong office. "They care as much about their appearance as anyone else and, considering everything, take good care of their skin."

She may be right, for the waitresses, clerks and telegraph operators at the Peking Hotel occasionally stop by the Max Factor counter to try out the samples of hand lotion and perfume on display. The bolder ones sometimes consent to have their nails polished. They cannot buy, however, for purchases must be made in foreign currency.

Mary Sanchez, the training director of Max Factor's international division, said in an interview here that the company is negotiating with the China National Light Industrial Import and Export Corp. for permission to extend its services to other major tourist centers, including Shanghai and Guangzhou (Canton).

The Chinese Import-Export Corp., a state-owned enterprise, also has expressed interest in buying theatrical makeup for Peking opera troupes and other drama companies.

But selling makeup to ordinary Chinese may prove an elusive goal, even for an accomplished merchandiser like Max Factor.

Along with permanent waves, skirts and other outward signs of femininity, cosmetics were officially denounced as decadent during the Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s. In the more relaxed period following the 1976 death of Mao Zedong, skirts and curls have made a comeback but so far there is no sign that makeup, too, is slated for rehabilitation.

"There are no laws against makeup but there is a widespread feeling that no respectable woman should wear it," said Lai Fengyun, the chief sales clerk at a Max Factor counter here, her own face without a trace of artifice.

Chinese department stores include what are called cosmetic departments, "but they mostly sell hand lotions and little tins of vanishing cream," Sanchez said. Creams are sanctioned by higher authorities on health grounds, as protection against the harsh winter winds that blow down from Siberia.

Perfumes also are beginning to reappear in pharmacies, the most popular a $1.50 scent called "Thunder in Springtime" that smells as overwhelming as it sounds.

Price might also block American inroads into the Chinese market, for even the cheapest Max Factor lipstick costs $3, and mascara is marked at $4, making them unlikely purchases for a Chinese factory worker averaging $30 a month in wages. Night creams and moisturizers are higher.

Despite complaints, the counter at the Friendship Store, the busier of the two, has been averaging about $700 in daily sales, Pei Jiajun, a salesman, said. "But there are some items no one will touch," he added, holding up a small jar of Orlane night cream marked at $57.

The sheer range of an American cosmetics line daunts most Chinese, even the young ones willing to experiment with imports from the West. "It was obvious to me that no one here could tell the difference between a moisturizer and a toner," said Sanchez, who spent several weeks in Peking training the sales clerks in the complexities of makeup application.

But they apparently learned fast. Sanchez said that after a few days of slide shows and demonstrations, the clerks demanded "practical experience" and dipped into the Max Factor cosmetic pots to make up each other.

"They put on everything from cleanser and moisturizer to blusher," Sanchez said. "There was a lot of oohing and aahing as they admired each other. And then, because it was time to go home, they washed everything off."

Coat from dogs

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Charlotte Baillie is hoping that one of her Samoyed dogs will have pups so that one day she can make herself a coat.

Mrs. Baillie, who breeds the dogs, has been making mittens from their thick, white coats and so far this winter has made five pairs using fur taken from her three dogs.

"Actually knitting the mittens is nothing, but preparing the dog hair to be knitted is a lot of work," she said.

The mittens are soft and the texture is like angora. Mrs. Baillie said her friends ask if the mittens smell when they get wet, "because you know how a dog smells when it is wet."

"I don't know why, but when the mittens get wet there is no smell," she said. "They dry much faster than lamb wool mittens and are much warmer."

The Samoyed was originally bred by Mongoloids in northern Siberia and northeastern Russia and was used in Arctic regions to guard reindeer herds and pull sleds.

The Samoyed

The breed is built for cold with an undercoat of fine, downy hair and an overcoat of longer hair. Mrs. Baillie uses all types of the dogs' hair for spinning and knitting.

"I had decided I was going to get Samoyed dogs and got all the books I could containing information about the breed and how to look after them.

"A few of the books mentioned saving the dog's hair after grooming because it made lovely warm coats and I became elated with this idea."

She knew how to knit but had no idea what spinning was about, so she contacted a local spinning club which put her in touch with a woman who got her a wheel from New Zealand.

"My ultimate goal was to spin my Sams' hair but I was told that I would be better off learning to spin with lamb's wool. It is solidly carded, longer and springier and stays together much easier than dog hair."

But now, having mastered the technique, she says that almost anyone who spins would spin with Samoyed hair if they could get it.

When Peggy Morgan, 36, divorced she told her 16-year-old daughter and 12-year-old son that it was their decision which parent they wanted to live with.

When, "in a spurt of passion" they told her they were leaving to join their father, she described her emotions.

By PEGGY MORGAN

HADDONFIELD, N.J. (AP) — The children say they are leaving to live with their father and fill up the house he wants to buy. After two years with me, it is his turn, they say.

My daughter tells me this, her flushed face tortured with tears that burn down cheeks still baby plump. She has always cried inconsolably at leave-takings.

She is bigger than I am now but is grievous with choice and decision. She is a child of 16.

If I had only left the divorce undone and unsaid any talk of custody and support, we might have lived unchanged a little longer. But another love tugged me from sole fidelity to the children.

God knows I had not been much of a mother the last few years, possessed by work, searching through bars and desperate parties — though I found nothing there and tried to live without — for adult love, when the children's should have been enough.

I was often sorry I fell into motherhood, for which I have no natural talent.

When the children were in the mountains last summer, alone I embraced the silence.

I also double-locked the door and burned a night light. I was glad when the kids came home.

I am almost certain my son should be with his father. I do not share his passion for football, hamburgers and the sun, I disapprove. I want him to write poetry, not howl.

My 12-year-old rakes my nerves like needles on splinters. He is hyper, distempered, impatient with imperfection, which is all around him. He is my mirror image.

My daughter, my friend, will be harder to relinquish, that miraculous mistake of a baby, the one who slept or smiled, who grew easily, who did not itch even with chicken pox.

In any case, my aging babies are nearly grown and gone. I cannot hold them long.

The types of fat in oil, lard, shortening, margarine and butter, are a topic of consumer concern judging from the following letters:

Question: I've just purchased some corn oil and the label states that it contains 56 percent polyunsaturated fatty acids and 12 percent satuated fatty acids. With all the reports about the fats in margarine and oils, what's in the remaining 32 per cent?

Answer: A type of atty acid called monounsaturated makes up the difference.

Cooking oils, lard and shortening are essentially all made up of fat (butter and margarine contain some water as well).

The reason that there is a lot of concern about what is in these products is that research is showing that saturated fatty acids tend to raise blood cholesterol levels and cis-polyunsaturated fatty acids (commonly abbreviated to polyunsaturated) tend to lower it. There is a possible connection between high cholesterol levels and heart disease. Monounsaturated fats have no effect on cholesterol levels.

Only oils that contain at least 40 per cent cis-polyunsaturated fatty acids and margarines that contain at least 25 per cent may list the amount of fatty acids on the label. These labelled products must also contain no more than 25 per cent of saturated fatty acids (a change from the original 20 per cent).

Question: There has been a lot of talk about trans-fatty acids lately. What are they and are they harmful? I've heard they can cause cancer and contribute to heart disease.

Answer: There is no evidence that trans-fatty acids can cause cancer. If they are associated with heart disease, it's indirectly. Trans-polyunsaturated fatty acids do not act like cis-polyunsaturated fatty acids in lowering blood cholesterol. Trans-acids either raise or simply have no effecton cholesteol levels.

Trans-fatty acids are monounsaturated or polyunsatuated acids — but with a slightly different chemical structure. They are not listed on product labels at present. Very small amounts are found naturally in fats.Most trans-fatty acids are produced by a process used to change oil to shortening or margarine.

Right now, the whole trans-fatty acid question is under review. So far, we know that trans-fatty acids are used by our body for energy and other functions just in the way saturated or cis-monounsaturated fatty acids are used. They're not toxic and won't produce any harmful effects unless your diet lacks an essential fatty acid called cis-linoleic acid found in most vegetable oils (except plam and coconut oils) and in the soft margarines and shortenings made from vegetabl8;997.we oils.

Margarines and oils are labelled based on the amount of cis-polyunsaturated fat acids they contain. At the moment, a government committee is considering if the percentage of trans-fatty acids should also appear on labels.

Question: Reports I have read state that certain fatty acids in margarines may be harmful. Should I now switch back to butter? (I've been using margarine).

Answer: That's a hard one to answer generally. Even with the high amount of trans-fatty acids found in margarine, most margarines still contain more cis-polyunsaturated fatty acids (which tend to lower blood cholesterol) than butter does.

The important point to remember is to cut down.

One of the best gadgets ever devised is the Blackwood convention, which enables a side to learn how many aces or kings it has. The great disadvantage of Blackwood is that players use the convention to excess. They show such an absorbing interest in aces and kings that they lose sight of the main objective, namely, how many tricks can be made.

Blackwood is basically used only in cases where a knowledge of how many aces or kings partner has will deterimine the best final contract. If other factors are more important — for example, voids, singletons, intermediate cards, trump length, and so on — the convention should not be used.

For a clear case of the proper use of Blackwood, consider the four notrump bid made here by North. If partner has two aces, North wants to get to six spades; if South shows three aces, North may later decide to undertake seven spades. And if South has only one ace, North plans to stop at five spades.

In the actual case, South's response to four notrump was five hearts (two aces). North correctly leaped to six spades and, oridinarily, would have made the slam. But West, who had listened attentively to the bidding, decided that normal defense would not stop the slam.

It seemed to West that if he led a high heart and won it, his side would probably get no more tricks. His opponents had bid much too confidently for him to expect his partner to take a second trick. So West decided to stake the outcome on the possiblity that East had the eight of hearts.

Accordingly, West's opening lead was the heart deuce! East won the heart with the eight, much to his surprise, and had no trouble at all finding the lethal club return.

Joel, Warwick win Grammys

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Doobie Brothers won Grammys for record and song of the year and Billy Joel and Dionne Warwick scored upset victories over disco stars, but at times the 22nd annual Grammy Awards sounded more like a gospel festival.

Rock and jazz stalwarts Bob Dylan, Paul McCartney's Wings, the Eagles, Duke Ellington and Ella Fitzgerald also won key awards Wednesday night from the members of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Miss Warwick, who last won a Grammy 10 years ago, beat out Donna Summer and Gloria Gaynor for best pop female performance for "I'll Never Love This Way Again."

She also won the Grammy for best rhythm and blues female performance for "Deja Vu," again beating Miss Summer as well as the late Minnie Riperton.

Dylan performed right after Miss Warwick, singing his born-again warning, "Gotta Serve Somebody." He won a standing ovation and then won the best male rock performance Grammy.

Mike McDonald, lead singer of the Doobie Brothers, shared the song of the year Grammy with Kenny Loggins and won another award for best arrangement accompanying vocalists for "What A Fool Believes." The Doobies won a fourth Grammy, for best pop group performance, for "Minute by Minute."

Joel won the album of year Grammy, the show's third top award, for "52nd Street" and also picked up the award for the best pop male performance.

Kenny Rogers, who hosted the show, won for best country male performance for "The Gambler." In addition, his "You Decorated My Life," was named best country song and Larry Butler was named producer of the year for his work with several of Rogers' singles and albums.

Earth, Wind and Fire won for best rhythm and blues performance by a group for "After The Love Has Gone," which also was named rhythm and blues song of the year. The group's "Boogie Wonderland" was cited for best rhythm and blues instrumental performance.

Miss Gaynor's "I Will Survive" was named disco recording of the year and Miss Summer won for best female rock performance for "Hot Stuff."

Supertramp's "Breakfast in America" won the Grammys for best engineered recording and best album package.

Robin Williams won the best comedy recording Grammy for "Reality ... What A Concept," the Eagles were honored for the year's best group rock performance for "Heartache Tonight" and McCartney's "Wings" won for best rock instrumental performance for "Rockestra Theme."

Composer John Williams picked up the seventh and eighth Grammys of his career, for best instrumental composition and best movie or television special sound track, both for "Superman."

Ellington's "At Fargo" was selected as the best big band jazz instrumental performance, Muddy Waters won for best ethnic or traditional recording for "Muddy Mississippi Waters Live" and Miss Fitzgerald won for best jazz vocal performance for "Fine and Mellow."

Rickje Lee Jones won for best new artist, Emmylou Harris for best country female performance for "Blue Kentucky Girl," the Charlie Daniels Band for best country group performance for "The Devil Went Down to Georgia" and Michael Jackson for best rhythm and blues male performance for "Don't Stop 'Til You Get Enough."

Welfare poverty probe urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A welfare rights group has asked the provincial ombudsman to investigate complaints that local welfare recipients are living below the poverty line because benefits they receive are inadequate.

Bruce Ericksen, president of the Downtown Eastside Residents Association, said Tuesday night he has asked Dr. Karl Friedmann to look into complaints raised in a United Way report released Tuesday.

"We've asked him to look into the inadequacy of welfare rates, the qualifications required for handicapped people to receive aid, and just how many people on welfare are employable," said Ericksen.

Friedmann was appointed last year to handle citizen complaints about government bureaucracy.

"A member of Friedmann's staff told us today (Tuesday) that the ombudsman has the jurisdiction to look into this," Ericksen said.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Tuesday United Way's criticism of welfare rates was incorrect because it ignored a number of important factors in compiling its figures.

However, Dr. Henry Hightower, chairman of the United Way's social planning and research committee, which released the report, said it was compiled from the best available information.

Hightower said researchers based their calculations on data obtained from several sources, including human resources.

"We would welcome an opportunity to sit down with the minister and discuss our findings," he said.

The report said that in spite of changes to the Guaranteed Available Income for Need program, assistance benefits remain inadequate.

It says allowances must be increased by at least $130 a month for most single recipients and up to $230 a month for some families during their first four months on assistance.

We'll help you create a job!

EMPLOYERS — you can benefit when you open up a new job for young people in your Business or Farm operation. Provide an opportunity for someone to learn worthwhile job skills, and the Province of British Columbia will share the cost of wages with you.

There are many young people willing and able to become productive members of our province's work force. When they do, it benefits everybody. All they need is the opportunity. You can give them that opportunity in a job that provides a good training experience, and we'll help you do it. We'll share the cost of wages with you when you hire an eligible young person for either a summer or permanent job that will allow them to learn as they go and develop marketable skills. The system is simple with a minimum of paper work.

You can hire the person of your choice or we can assist you in finding young people whose interests and talents match your job requirements.

Here's how it works.
It's easy to participate. If your business or farm has been in operation for at least one year, the Ministry of Labour will help you pay the wages of up to five young people. We will pay between $1.40 and $2.50 per hour as our share of the cost. For those jobs that will lead to permanent employment with your firm, we will consider funding for up to twelve months duration. Jobs may start anytime after April 1st, 1980, but we suggest that applications be forwarded early — allowing six weeks for processing.

How to apply:
Applications for funding are available from any Provincial Government Agent, Ministry of Labour Office or one of the B.C. Youth Employment Offices listed below.

Invasion music to his ears

TORONTO (CP) — For B. B. Gabor, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan was deplorable, but convenient.

Several months ago the Toronto musician had the good fortune to write and record an album that includes two songs about the Russians — Nyet, Nyet Soviet and Moscow Drug Club.

The invasion has created an environment ripe for the release of that album. And although Gabor stressed in a recent interview that both songs are not meant to be serious political statements, he is taking full advantage of this windfall of publicity.

The first single off the album, Nyet (co-written by Gabor and Paul Armstrong) was released on the Pye record label in England last summer and has been re-released there following the Soviet move.

In Toronto, several radio stations have been playing the song for some time, but its official release followed a February showcase performance by Gabor at a top rock club here. That performance was broadcast live by CHUM-FM, the city's largest FM radio station.

Anthem Records, which distributes Gabor in Canada, played up the political angle at a reception following the broadcast by handing out buttons with "Nyet, Nyet" printed on them in uneven, red letters. Others showed a stark black-and-white photo of Gabor, looking vaguely like a Russian dissident.

Gabor is not entirely happy with the image being created. He says that Nyet, Nyet and Moscow Drug Club are only two of many songs he has written or co-written, the others having nothing to do with world politics.

NFB film nominated

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — A feature film shot here by the National Film Board in the fall of 1978 has been nominated for an Academy Award.

The film, Bravery in the Field, is about a war veteran who is robbed by a juvenile delinquent. The youth later returns the veteran's war medals out of respect and the film examines the relationship that develops between the two.

The film, which includes a number of Saint John natives in bit parts, has been nominated for an award as the best live-action short. It is one of four National Film Board productions nominated.

Director Giles Walker said in Ottawa that he is pleased with the nomination, and added that the fact that four film board productions have received nominations speaks well of the board's efforts.

This TV 'governor' prefers blue jeans

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — James Noble, who plays the eager but witless Governor Gatling in Benson, is a relaxed and witty actor who has little in common with the bungling, well-intentioned politician.

Noble is a Texan who switched schools and career plans all at once, transferring from engineering at North Texas Agricultural College to Southern Methodist University to study drama.

Noble and actress Carolyn Coates have been married 23 years. Their daughter, Jessica, 16, is a high school student in Santa Monica where the Nobles currently make their home.

But the family still is in the process of becoming accustomed to living in California after moving from their permanent home in Leonia, N.J., which they've rented out.

New headquarters is a two-bedroom apartment which Jim and Carolyn are taking their time about furnishing. They've bought some antiques and other pieces they plan to take back east, if and when they return to New Jersey.

Meanwhile, Jim enjoys regular strolls along the beach, happy in the knowledge that his penchant for walking is a New York legacy. Unlike the somewhat stuffy Governor Gatling, he is happiest in blue jeans because "they save me the chore of making decisions in the mornings about what to wear."

What latent talent Jim had for engineering is expressed in do-it-yourself projects around the apartment, including the building of nests of bookcases.

Jim is an omniverous reader of novels, biographies and scientific subjects who says he doesn't collect books so much as they seem to collect themselves wherever he lives.

He describes his work schedule as "civilized." The series is filmed at the ABC studios at the far end of Hollywood — a good hour's drive from home. But Jim's hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., allowing him to set a leisurely pace.

He rarely cooks himself, limiting his culinary talents to grilling steaks or hamburgers. Carolyn and Jessica take turns at preparing dinner, which includes guests every week or two.

Odd growth a rose gall

jack beastall

Finding a mossy looking ball growing on a shoot or a rose bush can be a startling discovery.

It is a flower bud gone berserk? Could it be something dangerous to touch? These and similar questions are often asked by home gardeners.

The strange looking growth is a Rose Gall, called by English gardeners Robin's Pincushion. It is closely related to the Oak Apple found on Oak trees.

These galls are a means used by plants to preserve healthy tissues from destruction by insects.

Galls are formed by the building of a mass of cells in response to irritation caused by a grub which hatches from an egg laid within the tissues by a small fly.

The swelling forms around the tiny grub, thus limiting its movements. In a sense it is condemned to spend its life in jail.

This tiny incarcerated grub has a ravenous appetite which would require most of the foliage on the rose bush for appeasement, and that is the reason for its confinement.

It eagerly devours the walls of its prison causing the cells to multiply more rapidly and the walls to become thicker. Eventually, when it has grown considerably larger, it is able to eat its way to the outside.

The time at which this occurs coincides with the period of its life when it turns from a grub to a chrysalis. It falls to the ground, burrows under the surface and awaits transformation into a winged fly which returns to the plant to lay more eggs.

Superficially it would appear the formation of the gall is solely for the benefit of the grub, but in reality it is of greater benefit to the plant.

If the gall did not form, the gardener would have the same problem as experienced with chrysanthemum leaf-miner.

These grubs also develop from eggs laid between the upper and lower surfaces of the chrysanthemum leaves by a small fly.

Since no galls form on chrysanthemum leaves, the grubs are free to move between the leaf tissues, safe from birds, predators and sprays, feasting on the leaf cells until the foliage is destroyed.

By repsonding to the irriation caused by the grub's presence the oak and the rose prevent defoliation, thereby preserving their food manufacturing parts and their ability to persist.

Oak apples are found on twigs and young growths, round and green, but not mossy in appearance. On the leaves of the oak we find the Cherry Gall, small round red galls which serve the same purpose.

In local gardens a gall similar to the oak apple is found on Azaleas. Some gardenres have reported planting the gall in the hope of growing a new azalea, thinking it to be some kind of a fruit containing see.

While the plants use a quantity of valuable material in making galls, it is not wasted effort because the foliage and other important organs are preserved and the health of the plants maintained.

If you should find some of these mossy pinchushions on your roses, or the apple-like galls on azaleas, cut off the shoot just below the swelling. Slice the gall in half and study its structure; you will find it interesting.

Should one or more grubs be in residence it is wise to drop the pieces into a hot incinerator fire. Frequent cultivation of the soil around plants which develop galls will often expose the chrysalis to birds, sun heat, or other predators, and prevent development of future flies.

Pay hike for Campbell up to CRD committee

The Capital Regional District's finance and personnel committee will decide March 6 how much more money board chairman Jim Campbell should get.

The committee Wednesday postponed a recommendation, pending further study.

Campbell now is paid a total of $13,129. Of this, $8,551 is for his duties as chairman and $4,578 for his position as regional director for the Outer Gulf Islands.

The staff report also recommended per diem rates paid to regional directors be increased by $15 to $40 per day.

Langford director Ed Lubick said that when taxes are deducted his remuneration amounts to $450 a month.

He said the provincial government pays 18 cents per kilometre for travel expenses, and he suggested this might be the route to take.

Apartments pass despite objections

The Capital Regional District's local planning and zoning committee Wednesday approved an application from Cactus Developments Ltd. to build a 70-unit apartment building at 2006 Sooke Road in Colwood.

The approval was given in spite of objections from chief community planner J.G. Masterton who said the building would be in an inconvenient location too far from facilities.

But Langford director Ed Lubick said the site is between the Colwood golf course and is close to shopping facilities. It is bounded on the other side by Hatley Memorial Gardens, a cemetery.

21 saved in potash mine fire

COLONSAY, Sask. (CP) — Twenty-one miners were rescued Wednesday after being trapped for several hours as a result of a fire in the Central Canada Potash Co. Ltd. mine at Colonsay, 48 kilometres southeast of Saskatoon.

None of the miners was injured or suffered apparent ill effects after being caught for up to 10 hours in the tunnels, about 1,030 metres below the surface. Cause of the fire has not been determined.

Mine manager John Kalmet said the incident began about 7 a.m. CST and all miners had been brought to the surface by about 5 p.m. He said a truck carrying lubricants for mining machinery caught fire in one of the tunnels.

Motorist wins suit against policeman

OTTAWA (CP) — A Bedford, N.S., motorist was awarded $1,006 in damages Wednesday by the Federal Court because of the way he was treated when arrested by the RCMP on a charge of drunk driving.

In awarding the money to Ronald Wheaton, Mr. Justice Alliston Walsh said he was satisfied that the incident would never have occurred if both Wheaton and arresting officer Donald Power "had not been drinking to excess on the day in question."

Power was off-duty and in civilian clothes when he followed Wheaton to a trailer park after seeing him drive erratically. There was a scuffle in which Wheaton was injured.

Walsh said Wheaton was justified for being suspicious of a person who could not produce credentials to show he was a police officer.

Olympics now political: prof

By AB KENT

A boycott of the Olympic Games is the only effective way the Western democracies can tell Russia to keep hands off her neighbors, a visiting scholar said Wednesday.

He also said it is time the West recognized sports as a political reality.

Dr. Earle Zeigler, professor of physical education at the University of Western Ontario and president-elect of the American Academy of Physical Education, described in an interview the sport philosophy to be dealt with in a discussion of Soviet Sport and the Olympic Ideal, Friday at University of Victoria.

The author of more than 300 scholarly works on sports and physical education suggests the West sponsor a substitute for the Moscow Summer Olympics as a means of countering the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

Future Olympic contests should be based on a three-tier system that would recognize professional athletes, semi-professional or subsidized players, and amateur competitors, Zeigler said.

Russia and East Germany, the two leading contenders for athletic excellence, see the Olympics as a political force, he said. Both countries field their top professional athletes in world competition.

"I've studied the ancient and modern Olympics, amateurism, and professionalism in sport. I think it's become so important socially that it is not possible to keep politics and sport separate," the professor said.

"When the East Germans and Russians consider it as a thoroughgoing profession and supply the research institutes to provide the basic knowledge, how long are we going to survive in the world of sport?" he asked.

"They see it as a political force.

"In my mind, the battle in the 21st century is going to be between two ideologies with individual freedom at stake."

Zeigler said the Russians are willing to sacrifice freedoms to achieve excellence. And "they don't mind stepping into a neighboring country and suppressing some social freedoms."

The strongest objection Western democracy can make now is for 40, 50 or 60 nations to say: "We can't go on playing games with you people while you are blithely suppressing a country near you . . . and withhold participation in the summer Olympics.

"Maybe that way we can get through to the leaders and the people of Russia."

But Russia should also be told the West wants her to be part of the world community, he said.

"I think we have to work to live and let live, but I think if any power takes action against the world community . . . we need to sponsor some alternative to the Olympic Games this summer."

A more realistic future approach will be to recognize the professional athlete globally, Zeigler believes.

"What we have just seen in hockey is a rather startling upset of the top professional team by a bunch of guys operating as semi-professionals under the banner of Olympic ideals. This is giving a false ideal to youth, making a mockery of an outdated amateur ideal."

The three-tier system he proposes would still allow what he called cheating, in the various ways athletes and teams may be supported.

"But they're cheating horribly now. Let's get back closer to a moral level."

Although the athletic scholarship is well-established in the U.S., North Americans generally accept sports as being extracurricular in nature, not to be promoted by regular funding from a legislative body, or from a university budget.

"We think we can do it in a haphazard, unorganized, non-scientific way," Zeigler said. The result has been limited success.

"We've managed a modicum of respectability in the process."

The scholar predicts Canada will soon have a two-tier system in intercollegiate athletics, divided between the institutions granting athletic scholarships and those which do not.

'Sea gangsters' erased

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese fishermen, insisting they were protecting their livelihood against "gangsters of the sea," killed hundreds of dolphins today despite the outraged objections of conservationists. It was the second dolphin massacre in Japan in two years.

Greenpeace Foundation, the environmentalist group, lodged a formal protest with the Japanese government as the dolphin toll on western Japan's Iki Island rose past the 1,000 mark.

"They've been methodically slaughtering them," Susan Cate, a Greenpeace official, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview, adding that she obtained the figure from the fishermen themselves.

The fishermen were killing the sea mammals with long knives and clubs and feeding the carcasses into a shredding machine that reduced them to pulp for fertilizer, witnesses said.

Just two years ago, the fishermen of Iki, 2,000 kilometres southwest of Tokyo, caused a worldwide uproar after butchering 1,000 dolphins. Japanese embassies across the world were swamped with protest letters and a movement was started in the United States to boycott Japanese products in protest.

A study by the World Wildlife Fund has estimated that there are about 40,000 of the bottle-nose dolphins in the area. The fishermen say the mammals consume vast amounts of the yellowtail, cuttlefish and other fish on which they depend to earn a living.

Campbell Plowden, a director of the Greenpeace Foundation, said his group has filed a protest with the government and instructed its bureaus in Boston, San Francisco and Amsterdam to send separate complaints to Japanese embassies and consulates in Europe and North America.

A foreign ministry spokesman said any protests received will be sent to the agriculture ministry. But Kyoishi Obata, executive director of the Fishermen's Association, said: "The authorities know that the dolphins eat our catch and they sympathize with us."

Mugabe trip raises worry in Rhodesia

While voters flocked to the polls in Rhodesia's three-way election, officials were worried by an unexpected flight by Robert Mugabe to Mozambique.

Sources close to the guerrilla leader said he had gone to discuss a proposed coalition government for Rhodesia with Mozambique President Samora Machel and Tanzania President Julius Nyerere.

But officials supervising the election said he should have stayed in Rhodesia, to avoid any flare-up of partisan violence.

"The general picture is of very heavy polling, which has gone well in most areas," Sir John Boynton, the British elections commissioner, told a news conference. "It has been orderly in most places."

Police said three Mugabe supporters were killed when they attacked a mobile polling station in the Enkeldoorn district 110 kilometres south of Salisbury, the Rhodesian capital.

In other incidents around the country, Mugabe supporters threw stones at police vehicles at various places; a crowd beat up a Mugabe man accused of poisoning the water and soldiers used tear gas to drive back partisans of another faction, and police in Salisbury broke up a band of Mugabe supporters who were stoning supporters of Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

Generally, however, the first day of voting was "very quiet," said a spokesman for the British governor, Lord Soames. Armored cars and troop carriers loaded with armed soldiers patrolled urban and rural areas, and teams of foreign observers toured the 650 polling stations.

During the five-day election last year while the guerrilla war was still on, 218 guerrillas and 43 black civilians were killed.

Hostage meeting eyed

United Press International

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh is trying to arrange a meeting between the United Nations fact-finding commission and the 50 American hostages held in the U.S. embassy in Tehran for the 117th day, Tehran radio said today.

The broadcast monitored in London said Ghotbzadeh told the offical Pars news agency he is in contact with militants at the embassy on behalf of the ruling Revolutionary Council, seeking to arrange a meeting between the five-member commission and the captives.

Ghotzbadeh said such a meeting was on the agenda of the UN commission. The militants holding the Americans confirmed there have been such contacts, but have not yet reached a final decision as to whether to let the commission members see the hostges.

The commission has responded to word the hostages may not be released until at least May by saying "patience is needed."

World facing a glut of crude oil soon —OPEC minister

By THOMAS FRIEDMAN

DORA, Qatar (UPI) — A leading Arab oil minister predicted Wednesday there will be a "glut" of crude oil in the near future that should enable OPEC to restore order to the volatile and chaotic world market.

Sheikh Abdul Aziz bin Khalifa Al-Thani, oil minister of the tiny Persian Gulf state of Qatar and former president of OPEC, said, however, the 13-nation oil cartel should not hold an extraordinary price-fixing meeting until the market has stabilized.

The sheikh also called for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to consider co-ordinating natural gas prices — a resource that will eventually replace crude oil as the world's main energy source.

"We should really create a good market for gas, a good technology and a good study of the prices for the next 50 years because gas exists in the OPEC countries in billions and trillions of cubic feet. So we should really put our hands on it now," the 30-year-old American-educated minister said.

The minister, OPEC's youngest, also expressed his country's opposition to American troops being stationed in the Persian Gulf.

"The big powers should leave the Gulf countries by themselves and not have any intervention," he said. The Gulf countries should not come under "a certain shadow, whether it's the American umbrella or the Russian umbrella."

Qatar is a peninsular state located midway along the eastern coast of Saudi Arabia. Although it has a tiny population, it is one of the world's major oil exporters — 500,000 barrels per day — and sits atop possibly the world's largest deposit of natural gas.

Dressed in a long, white robe and twisting a chain of silver beads through his fingers, the son of Qatar's ruling emir predicted that the end of winter and the high level of oil stockpiles will combine to a produce a glut of oil that will encourage OPEC producers to close ranks around a single compromise price.

"There will be a glut in the market and if there is a glut this will help OPEC to unify prices in June," the minister said, adding the proviso that the situation could change if the flow of oil from any major producer were interrupted.

"I think the market will stabilize and if the market stabilizes, this will unify our prices," he said while blaming multinational oil companies for keeping oil prices high on the spot markets, saying one should examine the "billions and billions of dollars" those companies have made.

At its December meeting in Venezuela, OPEC for the first time failed to establish a unified price structure. The resulting free-for-all saw producers jumping over each other to record levels of nearly $40 per barrel. OPEC rates currently range from a low of $26 for Saudi crude to a high of $37 for Algerian. Quatar crude sells for $29.

"The main thing is to have one single price in OPEC," said Sheikh Abdul Aziz, who also serves as his country's finance minister. "This is the main objective of our meeting in June (in Algiers). Either we are going to increase the price or freeze it. Both are acceptable as long as we can unify our prices."

Cohesion on prices, he said, reinforces OPEC solidarity, helps individual producers plan their production and revenues and contributes to the stability of the world economy.

Post office digs the dirt if that's what you're after

LONDON (AP) — Where can one buy the best dirty books in London and how much will they cost?

Britain's Post Office has the answer.

The Times let its readers know the secret Wednesday with a front-page story about what it called "an unusual public service."

It disclosed that information is available through a system run by the Post Office. The system is claimed to be the world's first publicly available computer information service.

Launched last March, it is fed into any home or office equipped with a specially-rented television set linked to the telephone and a calculator-size keyboard.

Dial up the Prestel Viewdata system and on to the screen comes what you want to know — everything from the weather forecast to the price of tomatoes, the time of the next train to Stoke-Upon-Trent and everything you wanted to know about dirty books but were afraid to ask.

The Times said that item is offered by Mills and Allen Communications, one of the electronic publishing houses developed to serve Viewdata. It offers tips on magazines about health, gardening, cookery, children's jokes and, if you press number 64, a "Buyers guide to dirty books, by Rupert Street-Walker."

After a chatty introduction acknowledging that "most of us feel a little awkward when it comes to buying pornography," the guide gets down to basics, the Times reported.

It advises to be sure of what one really wants and not to buy a girly magazine of "usually nice girls, wearing little or nothing," when what one is looking for is lesbianism, transvestism or bondage.

Street-Walker says of one bookshop, for example: "Not too many girly mags and not too much cellophane. I found the selection of erotic novels very good."

The Times advised that if this depresses the enquirer why not dial 245 on prestel for the Bible Society offering a text for the day: "If you become angry, do not let your anger lead you into sin . . .", Ephesians Chapter 4.

Mills and Allen, of course.

Bennett will stick if defeated

By JAKE BANKY

Premier Bill Bennett says he won't call an election if his government — which holds a four-seat majority — is defeated in a vote during the new session of the legislature.

The premier revealed his intentions in an off-the-cuff comment while talking to reporters earlier this week.

The first session of the 32nd B.C. Legislature was prorogued in a brief ceremony today and the second session opens at 2 p.m. Friday with the Throne Speech.

Bennett says he is not worried by the meagre four-vote margin he commands in the 57-seat house.

If he is defeated, says the premier, his government will carry on and he will not consider the loss of a vote to be a loss of confidence.

Going into the new session the NDP opposition is giving serious consideration to tactics aimed at bringing the government down.

If the Bennett government is to avoid a defeat it will have to follow the same rules so strictly applied last session — no travelling by ministers, all backbenchers to be present and accounted for and no unnecessary baiting of the opposition.

Whether this approach proves effective will depend on how serious the NDP is about forcing a crucial vote when just enough Socreds are missing from the chamber.

The opposition, it is certain, will not agree to "pairing" of members for voting purposes.

Socred party whip George Mussallem will have a busy time marshalling his troops.

However many observers feel Bennett could not get away with his decision to stay on if the government is defeated in a vote.

Although there are well-accepted constitutional routes around such a defeat, it's believed public pressure would force the premier to call an election.

The Throne Speech to be read by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving, blueprinting the government's plans for the coming year, is expected to contain few surprises.

Senior civil servants predict it will be a medley of old favorites from previous speeches.

There will be a renewed commitment to improved forest management, particularly to job creation through an accelerated reforestation program.

The Denticare program, main feature of the 1979 Throne Speech, could make a comeback.

There could also be a new pledge of a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, promised by Bennett last year but lately cast into doubt by Socred prevarication.

A sure bet for the new session is legislation to provide fresh ground rules for the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Another sure thing is legislation to guarantee fair compensation for people who have their property expropriated.

Attorney-General Allan Willians will follow through on the government's promise to bring in — at long last — legislation dealing with Sunday store openings.

It's understood his commitment to the county system met with far too much opposition within cabinet.

The legislation will be delayed and the people of B.C. will have to wait another year before their concerns about regional districts are dealt with.

Even if it doesn't rate a mention, the new session is expected to see the

Doctors support nurses as talks set to resume

By MIKE HUGHES

The nurses, members of the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C., Tuesday voted 98 per cent in favor of a strike to back their demands. Talks involving mediator Clarke Gilmour are set for next week.

"The nurses' heavy vote in favor of a strike if an agreement is not reached is clear evidence of the rightness of the nurses' bargaining position," B.C. Medical Association president Dr. Mel Petreman said today.

He said the association's board of directors has unanimously backed the nurses and added that it is important now that both sides get back to the bargaining table.

"The fact that the nurses have been pushed to the point of having a strike vote is an example of the deteriorating condition of our health care plan in B.C.," said Petreman, a Nanaimo physician.

"While not directly involved in these negotiations the provincial government through its under-funding of the health care system is certainly very much a partner in the negotiations."

Meanwhile, Gilmour is to meet Monday with representatives of the Health Labor Relations Association which bargains for the 113 B.C. hospitals.

He will meet Tuesday with negotiators for the RNABC.

"It is our hope that this will mean the beginning of a productive round of bargaining," RNABC spokesman Jerry Miller said today.

He said so far there has been no real negotiating because HLRA has refused to talk about the issues.

The nurses — including those who work in nine Victoria area hospitals — were decisive in their strike vote.

Region waffles on bus passes

Capital Regional District politicians wouldn't say yes and wouldn't say no Wednesday on the controversial issue of bus passes for senior citizens on supplementary incomes.

Instead, they waffled.

They first rejected a motion by Victoria director Ald. Bill McElroy that the program be continued after the $5 bus passes expire June 1.

Then they rejected a suggestion that the passes not be renewed.

Instead, they took pot shots at the media for reporting remarks made by board chairman Jim Campbell at a meeting of the transit planning committee.

Campbell brought howls of protests from angry pensioners when he said special concessions like the bus passes are a vote-buying gimmick and that senior citizens drive good cars and ride the ferries for fun.

Transit planning committee chairman Norma Sealey said the press should have concentrated on the real issue — whether social assistance should be subsidized through public transit.

She said it is difficult to have all the facts presented when the press concentrates on "two or three crummy remarks."

The board decided that Sealey and Campbell should meet with Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy to

Bogota hostage talks stalled

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Mediation efforts stalled today at the besieged Dominican Embassy residence and authorities moved riflemen into firing positions around the building where leftist guerrillas were holding 45 diplomats hostage, including the U.S. Ambassador.

As tension mounted, Mexican Ambassador Ricardo Galan told reporters outside the residence that the guerrillas have rejected former Foreign Minister Alfredo Vasquez Carrizosa as mediator and have set a 10 p.m. EST deadline for the government to enter direct negotiations through Foreign Minister Diego Uribe.

President Julio Cesar Turbay said he would study a five-point ransom demand for releasing the estimated 45 hostages including ambassadors and other top diplomats from 16 countries and the Vatican.

The government press office said mediator Alfredo Vasquez Carrizosa, a former foreign minister, had relayed the following guerrilla demands to the government:

—Freedom for jailed guerrilla suspects, particularly 311 to be named later.

—Publication in major Colombian newspapers of a manifesto by the group, which has identified itself as being from the April 19th Movement.

—Payment of $50 million ransom which could be collected from the countries whose diplomats are held hostage.

—Negotiations between the guerrillas and the government.

The government statement said Vasquez expressed his concern to the guerrillas for the wounded inside the residence and had suggested the release of women hostages.

Clover Point foul-up billed to taxpayers

Taxpayers of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay will be stuck with a $475,000 bill as a result of the Clover Point outfall settlement approved Wednesday by the Capital Regional District.

And there will be legal fees on top of that.

Victoria director Ald. Bill McElroy asked board chairman Jim Campbell what the cost of Vancouver lawyer Mary Southin's services would be.

Campbell said no bill has yet been received.

The three municipalities will pay $225,000 of $324,000 awarded contractor Harry Berg who abandoned the controversial project in 1977.

Berg claimed the design of the outfall did not adequately compensate for tides and currents in the area.

Engineering consultants Ker Priestman and Associates and Associated Engineering Services Ltd. will pay the remainder.

In addition, the three municipalities will also pay $250,000 for polyethelene pipe purchased by Berg, including diffuser sections and concrete weights.

The project was abandoned at the 1,000 feet mark in the fall of 1977.

The contract for a 6,900-foot outfall was let for $2,547,500 and Berg has been paid $1,545,000 for work done to take the pipe about 200 feet off the end of Clover Point.

Campbell said the pipe lying on the ocean floor in Ross Bay will be salvaged.

The board recently agreed to pay $280,000 to consultants CH2M Hill for a new outfall design.

Directors were told it will cost approximately $4 million to take the pipe out 3,600 feet.

Uranium mines driven out?

Environmentalists were elated today, but others expressed disappointment with Premier Bill Bennett's decision to place a moratorium on uranium mining.

The president of the B.C. & Yukon Chamber of Mines warned that mining companies will be driven away from B.C. as a result of the government's seven-year freeze on uranium exploration and mining.

Don Mustard said uranium firms will now move into Sasakatchewan and Ontario.

"A study in Sasakatchewan indicated uranium exploration and mining are safe and these activities also go on in Ontario," Mustard said.

Jerry Hammersmith, a cabinet minister minister in the Saskatchewan government, was cynical about the Bennett moratorium, calling it a "crass" way to get some political mileage.

He said the B.C. announcement is not specific enough. As well, B.C. has neither the worker health and safety regulations nor the environmental regulations that are in place in Saskatchewan, Hammersmith said.

The freeze announced Wednesday by Premier Bennett also killed a potential $300 million deal to sell B.C. uranium to Korea.

Don Sawyer of Norcen Energy Resources Ltd. said his firm and its partners had until Dec. 31, 1981, to get required permits to deliver 4.3 million pounds of uranium to Korea during a 10-year period beginning in 1983.

"If we hadn't received the permits by that time, then the contract would have been null and void," he said in Calgary following the Bennett announcement.

A consortium of companies headed by Norcen has invested $5.7 million in exploration and engineering studies for its Blizzard uranium property about 50 kilometres southeast of Kelowna.

Rick Hicks, manager of the mines chamber, said more than $25 million has been spent in B.C. on uranium exploration and development in the past few years and that there are ore than 30 mining companies involved in the field.

But if mining men were unhappy, environmentalists were delighted by the moratorium.

However, at the same time they are wondering what motivated the decision.

Bennett, in announcing the

Schmidt nearer boycott

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt called again today for a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan and hinted strongly that West Germany will join the United States in a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

(See related stories, pages 20 and 43)

In the opening speech of a foreign-policy debate in the Bundestag, or parliament, Schmidt said West Germany, as well as "the great majority of the peoples of the world," demand "a prompt end to the Soviet military intervention."

"The Federal Republic is also of the opinion that it is up to the Soviet Union to create the conditions in which teams from all countries can participate in the (Olympic) games," Schmidt said.

"These conditions do not exist — or should I say, do not yet exist, at the present time."

Schmidt noted that the national Olympic committees have until late May to accept or reject formal invitations to the Summer Games in Moscow.

It's puzzling in the extreme to understand B.C. Hydro's need to raise electricity rates again, since in four weeks it will be free of the money-sucking transit operations in Victoria and Vancouver.

The red ink on transit which Hydro now absorbs should roughly balance the revenue from the seven per cent rate hike. Last year the losses on the buses hit $61 million, but soon the B.C. government and everyone who drives a car will be subsidizing transit out of the provincial treasury and with a three cent tax on every gallon of gas.

On April Fool's Day the regional districts and the Urban Transit Authority assume the burden, relieving Hydro of any responsibility for the unloved orphan.

Its new legal guardians are still arguing about paternity and child support payments, but that's another story and Hydro doesn't really care if there's a happy ending as long as somebody takes the buses off its hands.

Shedding transit is a $60 or $70 million windfall for the corporation. So, the question again. Having plugged this immense drain on its corporate finances why does Hydro still have to increase the price of electricity?

You can argue details with Allan Purdy and his cultural funding subcommittee, but their contentious report on the financial picture of local theatre and musical organizations carries a message of pure common sense that ought to have been delivered long ago.

The reactions of some of the groups criticized has been to aim for Purdy the man. He's been pictured as some sort of presumptuous artistic busybody poking his nose in where he's not wanted, a businessman without a shred of sensitivity.

Some of the cultural commissars who were quick with the catty remarks ought to remember the recommendations were a collective effort by six individuals who are not exactly strangers to the local cultural scene. Some of them wanted to make even stronger remarks about the financial affairs of some organizations.

There's no accounting for personal taste in in drama or music, and someone else might have picked six others with equally long careers in the performing arts or cultural administration. But they know what they're talking about.

They were chosen by aldermen from the four municipalities and together decided it was time to tell some groups the facts of life. The real surprise is that so many were surprised at what they said.

A measure of accountability, with arts groups being held to some standards of fiscal performance, is hardly a revolutionary concept. With public funding of the arts in Victoria from all levels of government standing at $2 million a year, it's the minimum expected by the people who pay the bills.

They have the right to argue that this musical group or that theatre troupe didn't get enough money or the committee got some facts wrong. (Although the committee depended entirely on briefs from the grant-seekers for financial information).

But someone who drinks as deeply from the public trough as, say, the symphony or the Bastion Theatre, should know better than to get worked up when duly-appointed representatives of the public ask a few questions about how their money is spent.

They consider themselves professionals but you'd never have guessed it from the hysteria generated in the arts community in the last week. Judging by the reaction, they found the right targets.

Purse thieves find it easy

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Victoria police today issued a warning to women: take more precaution on the street if you want to keep your purses.

And while there is little anyone can do to prevent the crime entirely, city police officers have launched a campaign to tell women, particularly the elderly, to be more wary.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the detective branch, says there have been 12 cases reported in the city in the past four months.

The victims were in their 60s and 70s. One was in her 80s and one, robbed of $30 as she was walking down a lane in the 1400-block Stadacona last Nov. 11, was 90.

Fortunately, says Stewart, there have been no serious injuries but one 64-year-old woman attacked by a trio of youths at Tolmie and Rutledge Jan. 24 and robbed of her purse containing $6 suffered a fractured left wrist and broken nose when she fell face down to the curb.

Another woman, 66, received a bruised elbow when she became the victim of an attempted purse-snatching on Belmont near Haultain Dec. 2, and a 62-year-old woman twisted her ankle and bruised her knee when two youths tried to wrench her purse out of her arm Feb. 18 in front of 940 Humboldt.

Stewart says there is no way of telling what long-term effect the experience may have on them. All suffered varying degrees of shock.

The culprits in each case, says Stewart, were believed to be juveniles. As the attacks were so swift, and occurred at dusk or night, descriptions were rarely obtained.

Only two arrests have been made. Two 14-year-old boys were charged with an attempted purse-snatching Dec. 20 on Alder near Reed. And three 15-year-olds have been charged with another attempted robbery of a 73-year-old woman in the 900-block North Park on Feb. 15.

Police are investigating the trio in connection with an incident Feb. 3 in which an 81-year-old woman had her purse containing $10 yanked from her arm as she walked home in the 1000-block Pendergast.

Stewart says he's particularly concerned about the attitudes of kids arrested for such crimes.

The boy said his group staked out an apartment where elderly people were living.

It was, he told the officers, "easy pickings."

Police are determined to make the crime — generally regarded as the most cowardly of offences — anything but easy.

Officers are talking to senior citizen groups and community organizations to try to get women to be more cautious.

They suggest women carry only small amounts of money. If they have to go out at night they should stick to well-lighted paths and walk with a companion.

Purses should never be carried dangling from the hand and straps of purses shouldn't be wound around the hand or shoulder.

While the crime prevention brochures advise victims of an attack not to resist, Stewart says that is impractical as no women is going to give up her purse without some struggle.

Of the 12 women attacked in the latest series of snatchings, seven managed to cling on to their handbags.

"I think the best advise is to resist to a point," says Stewart. "But if the woman is threatened, of course, she should let go."

Noel called on road plan

A highways ministry spokesman today denied a claim by Ald. Sandy Noel of Saanich that the ministry purchased land for a McKenzie-Pat Bay Highway interchange.

Several properties were purchased for road-widening as part of the $7 million highway extension project, the spokesman claimed.

None was bought for an interchange, he said.

Noel said Wednesday the ministry prepared a set of plans for the interchange and started buying property.

Earlier this week Noel said the interchange was scrapped at the last minute because of pressure from Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, the MLA for Saanich-The Islands, and former mayor of Saanich.

But the spokesman restated today a rough interchange design was drawn up at Saanich's insistence to show council what could be done in future.

Noel says Saanich didn't ask for the design and that it was more comprehensive than council anticipated.

Gov't-run jetfoil ideal, says Bawlf

Sam Bawlf said today it would be ideal if the government were to run a jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle.

But if private enterprise operates such a service, Bawlf said he's positive it could operate profitably without government subsidies.

Bawlf, a former cabinet minister, said the only government help a private jetfoil group might seek would be a loan from the B.C. Development Corporation, something many new business look for.

Bawlf's comments came after it was alleged Wednesday the government orchestrated the demise of the Princess Marguerite to pave the way for "friends of the government" to establish a jetfoil service to Seattle.

Esquimalt-Port Renfrew NDP MLA Frank Mitchell said replacing the Marguerite with the smaller, slower Queen of Prince Rupert was to ensure adequate business for the jetfoil service.

Mitchell predicted the project's backers will seek government subsidies.

Bawlf said a jetfoil group would probably want the government to make a policy statement supportive of jetfoil service.

"Obviously no private company is going to invest $25 million in a jetfoil system this year if the government intends to put on the Queen Mary next summer to skim off the peak tourist trade," he said.

Bawlf also said a large ship running to Seattle once a day is not an answer to the problem of bringing tourists to Victoria.

He likened the insistence on one big ship making a single run a day to Air Canada being asked to put a single 747 jumbo jet on the Victoria-Vancouver run in the summer months only.

With the smaller jetfoils, the number of vessels and trips could be cut back to accommodate the reduced business in the winter months but the service wouldn't be closed down completely as is now the practice with a single, large vessel on the run.

Bawlf said he has no financial interest in any group promoting jetfoil service though he said he wouldn't hesitate to invest in such a group.

Jetfoils, manufactured by Boeing in Seattle, are in short supply.

"I don't think Mr. Mitchell knows what a difference diesel engines would make to a hull as old as the Marguerite," Bawlf said. "Diesels would shake her to pieces."

Asked what he'd do if he were in government, Bawlf said he'd run the Marguerite ashore, refurbishing her to include duty-free stores, tourist shops, eating spots.

Meanwhile, Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe said he's going to introduce a motion at tonight's council meeting urging the provincial government to reconsider its decision to put the Queen of Prince Rupert on the Seattle run.

Blencoe fears having the Queen of Prince Rupert on the run will cost Greater Victoria $10 million a year in lost revenue.

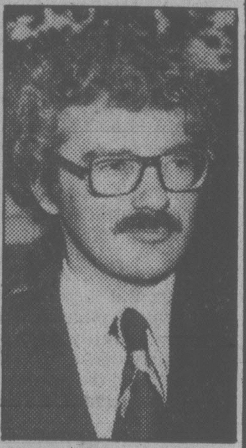
Two holdups linked?

Two armed robberies in Victoria on Wednesday may be connected.

A city police spokesman said no definite link has been established but there are some features in common with the descriptions of the robbers.

Wallis Food Market, 3189 Quadra, was held up around noon, and Willows Park Grocery Store, 2405 Eastdowne, shortly after 9 p.m.

The first robbery netted $190, the second $305.



Gallery director resigns

The director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has quit.

Roger Boulet, director for the past five years, said in his letter of resignation problems between some trustees and himself had created apparently insoluble difficulties.

A gallery spokesman said today the board has not yet met to consider the resignation and a move is under way to persuade Boulet to stay.

Gallery board chairman Dr. Burton Kurth, who said he was speaking as an individual member, said he deeply regrets Boulet's resignation.

"The gallery has made excellent progress in all areas under Mr. Boulet's direction. At all times its welfare and reputation has come first with him and its present status is a testimony to his ability and concern."

Boulet said in a prepared statement he will continue to support the gallery and to assist it in any way he can.

League attacks poll on abortion

By BRENDA DALGLISH

An attempt has been made to prejudice the medical staff at Victoria General Hospital on the abortion controversy, a pro-abortion campaigner charged Wednesday.

Jennifer Lowen, president of the local branch of Canadian Abortion Rights Action League, criticized the wording of a poll on the work of the VGH abortion committee, and a letter to staff doctors.

A poll of the doctors is being carried out to get their opinion of the abortion committee's rejection of almost every application it's received since it began working early in January.

The results of the poll, which was conducted among 200 doctors, will be counted Monday or Tuesday.

Dr. Don Carlow, VGH medical director, defended the poll, saying it is a simple question that asks if the present activities of the abortion committee are either appropriate or too strict. There is also space on the form for comments.

But Lowen said the poll calls for the medical staff to make a judgment on fellow doctors — something proffesionals tend to be reluctant to do — rather than addressing the direct question of abortion.

The question was phrased in a way that supports the committee, she said, because it's generally easier to choose a positive statement like "appropriate" rather than a negative like "too strict."

Lowen also objected to a letter signed by the three members of the abortion committee on VGH stationery and sent to all staff doctors just a day before the poll was distributed.

She claimed it was misleading and an effort to sway the doctors.

Carlow said the committee's letter was on hospital stationery because it's a committee of the hospital.

He questioned the abortion league's protest.

"What business is it of their's? This is an internal hospital matter."

Dr. David Ripley, a member of the committee, said the letter was sent to inform the medical staff of the committee's actions and position so that an informed decision could be made — not as an attempt to prejudice the doctors.

The letter said it was forwarded "to explain to our colleagues the position we have taken in this recent controversy."

"We have tried to screen applications for significant hazards to the patient's health," the letter says. "On this basis we have passed women with phlebitis, diabetes, physical immaturity, serious psychiatric disease and for reasons of sexual assault. We found, however, that the vast majority of applications were being made on social or economic grounds and we did not feel that these reasons justified abortion."

But Lowen objected to the definition of health that the doctors, (Ripley, H.J. Calder and John Cooper), included. She said the letter identified a definition of health as one developed by the World Health Organization but in fact it was only part of that organization's definition.

The letter went on to state: "There are no easy solutions for the unplanned pregnancy. In recent years there has been growing pressure from some groups in society for abortion on demand. We do not feel that this can be justified medically, legally or ethically.

"We do not acknowledge that we have an obligation to alter our principles on abortion or any other important medical issue simply to keep abreast of changing public opinion. We have reason to believe that our position has broad support among our colleagues."

Target: tax defaulters

Property owners who default on their municipal taxes may soon face stiffer penalties.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today the government is considering tying the interest penalty for late payments to the current bank interest rate.

At present a municipality may charge a maximum of only 10 per cent per annum on late tax payments. That is almost five per cent lower than the bank would charge if the money was borrowed.

"Our thought is that the penalty should be tied into the current interest rates to allow for fluctuations," Vander Zalm said.

Western caucus urged to stave of separatism

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Wednesday gave president Cedric Steele the go-ahead to ask incoming prime minister Pierre Trudeau for the creation of a caucus of opposition MPs from the west.

Steele will suggest the chamber meet Senator Ray Perreault or some other senators to discuss Vancouver Island concerns and ask Trudeau to consider the caucus for the four Western provinces.

Steele said such a caucus could discourage increasingly frequent separatist talk.

In the past, he said, businessmen would have called any one talking of Western separatism "crazy people with a loony idea."

But he said chamber past-president Mel Cooper, the owner of radio station CFAX, has told him some business leaders in Vancouver are seriously beginning to consider separatism

Cooper said later he doesn't favor separatism but merely reporting what he'd heard discussed in Vancouver.

"We've all heard talk of Western separatism," Cooper said, "but in the past, business leaders, who have usually shown some concern for the country, pooh-poohed it."

However, he said some business leaders are now suggesting it may be time for Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. to consider separation.

Cooper, who declined to reveal any names, said: "One major business leader, top-level, said if someone wanted to ask for funds for such a group (separatists), there would be an immediate response."

Cooper said he had heard mention of separatism at several meetings.

The separatism talk was also touched on by Health Minister Rafe Mair.

In rejecting the idea that the federal government should appoint senators to cabinet, Mair said in Kamloops he wants an overhaul of the constitution.

Mair, MLA for Kamloops and head of the B.C. delegation to last year's federal-provincial talks on constitutional reform, said the fact no Liberals were elected west of Manitoba is potentially the biggest calamity that has befallen Canada.

Mair said he opposes proposals that Trudeau appoint western senators to his cabinet.

"The thought of Senator Jack Austin (a former principal secretary to Trudeau from Vancouver) going and representing B.C., a man who is not elected with no legitimate base, just horrifies me," Mair said.

The minister said suggestions contained in the constitutional report prepared by former Liberal cabinet minister Jean-Luc Pepin and former Ontario premier John Robarts, calling for creation of an upper house of Parliament with regional representation, should be implemented.

Vancouver-Kingsway NDP MP Ian Waddell called on Trudeau in a letter to establish a Commons committee on Western development.

Ex-mayors a little short-sighted

Chamber representatives Wednesday first wanted to peek 50 years into the future but when president Cedric Steele asked former mayors of the four core municipalities if they'd like to discuss what the city would be like a half-century from now, they suggested they wouldn't be around that long.

So March 6, chamber directors and the ex-mayors will meet with a University of Victoria urban geographer to discuss the growth and development of Greater Victoria over the next two decades.

Steele said a handbook could result from the discussions.

U.K. steel strike buckles

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of steelworkers employed by privately owned companies went back to work Wednesday in a growing revolt against an eight-week national steel strike by employees of state-owned British Steel.

Wednesday's return to work involved men at the Bidston steel mill on Merseyside and Firth Brown, the biggest independent steel firm in the northern industrial city of Sheffield.

On Monday, more than 3,000 employes of two major independent steelmakers trooped back to work, following the lead of 800 men at the Canadian-owned Sheerness Steel Co. who defied mass pickets to stay at work.

Employes of privately owned steel plants earn about 20 percent more than their colleagues in the state-run sector. The 110,000 BSC men want a 20-per-cent increase in their average weekly base rate of £92 (about $239). BSC has offered 12 per cent.

Soviets seeking way to pull out of Afghanistan?

Times News Services

Signals from the Kremlin suggest that the Soviet leaders are looking for a face-saving way to extricate their forces from the increasingly costly venture in Afghanistan, according the reports from the Associated Press in Moscow.

In a major speech by President Leonid Brezhnev last week and hints through the Soviet press, a London newspaper and a U.S. industrialist, the Russians seem to suggest that they are prepared to start pulling their soldiers out of Afghanistan if the United States reciprocates by stopping all aid to the Moslem rebels fighting the Communist Afghan regime.

"I want to state very definitively," Brezhnev said last Friday, "we will be ready to commence the withdrawal of our troops as soon as all forms of outside interference directed against the government and people of Afghanistan are fully terminated."

"Let the United States together with the neighbors of Afghanistan guarantee this, and then the need of Soviet military assistance will cease to exist."

Writing in the Literary Gazette, commentator Leonid Zamyatin called on President Carter "to issue a command for ending thrusts into Afghanistan's territory, for stopping arms shipments, for liquidating bases of mercenaries, in short, for discontinuing all forms of interference directed against the government and people of Afghanistan."

"Then there would be no more of the reasons which caused the Afghan leadership to ask us for help," Zamyatin said.

U.S. industrialist Armand Hammer, after a meeting with Brezhnev Wednesday, said the president told him he understood that Carter cannot control all the elements in Afghanistan. But he said Carter could "use his influence" against foreign intervention, meaning the support Pakistan, China and others are giving the Afghan rebels.

Spain quits cod zone

OTTAWA (CP) — Spain has agreed to withdraw six trawlers which were fishing cod in a closed area outside Canada's 200-mile zone, a fisheries department official said today.

The official said the trawlers were to have left the area Tuesday, but bad weather has prevented aircraft from checking.

As a result, Canada and Spain will resume negotiations next week on a bilateral fishing agreement. The talks were broken off two weeks ago by Canada because Spain refused to remove the trawlers.
